Mr. Burdick—The following versification of a well known joke is at your disposal.

As chance on luckless fate did prove, He soon espy'd his game,
'Twas M-M-bought the wood; A wag of noted fame.

He bade the fellow drive it home, Who quite rejoie'd, obey'd, And in the cellar stow'd the wood, Then-waited to be paid.

Now come with me within the house; Says M-to the squire; Where I will pay you for your load, What'er you may require.

To gain the room where M-dwelt, An entry must be pass'd Quite long-thro' which our honest squire Was hastening quite fast.

But quickly soon his speed was check'd, When M ___ calmly said, The Small pox you have had, no doubt, So need not be afraid.

'SMALL Pox!!!-bawl'd out the frighted

With phiz of Hogarth-touch, 'Small Pox!' not I in faith, egad, Nor do I want it much.

But why that question tell me, pray, 'Tis not near here, I trow-'Yes, only six have died of it, And four are dying now.

Good Lord!' exclaim'd the breathless clown, Each hair erect in fright-Then-swift as legs could carry him, He quit our wicked wight:

Nor stopp'd his wood or cash to gain, He gave them all leg bail, And sped with haste from whence he came To spread the horrid tale.

Some months from thence, by courage led, He vow'd' he try again-He came to town, he gain'd the house, He knock'd-but knock'd in vain

For M-then had quit the place, Where gone no soul could say-So back again our Sawney sped, To curse the luckless day,

ADVICE TO THE LADIES. An Antient Writer gives the following ad-

"Lovely creatures take well this advice, formed to wipe off blemishes in your conduct; some of which are rather the fault of your situation in the world, and your education, than your natural dispositions.

"If you would be truly valuable, esteem not yourselves chiefly according to your money and lands, but on the grace of your person and minds; read a little more; read divinity, morality, history; innocent poetry, and the stories of generous lovers.

"You dress well and have the belle air any indulgence after said time. It is als his and mein, be as polite in your language as in your dress, and learn to write in a neat stile, I mean so as to be able to write on all occasions, not as scholars but as gentlewomen. As you are ingenious, a little application forms you good housewives, but to improve the beauties of the mind and carriage will cost you more-Blend both accomplishments together, and do not as some, be mutes and statues, in company, nor, as others, perpetual drums. No longer be won by faces with brainless heads to them, or silk stockings with run away spindle legs beneath them, neither mistake a low bow for pure good manners, nor a powdered tortured head with a | o'clock, A. M. long tail for gentility, nor a laced coat for an estate; servile cringing for true love; nor a smooth tongue for good sense.—Above all do not mistake wit for wisdom, and cast a benign and tender eye on him who has steady manly virtue, and prudence in his conduct, and gives fair hopes of his mending at heart the main chance."

Also two | Hanes, George Hagely, Henry Hanes, Eliseized and kept. We then put to sea in our leaky boat with a few pieces of pork and 5 galions of water. After remaining at sea in this situation for four days, and finding no relief, we put back for the land, which we regained on the 5th of September, as we judge, in latitude 25. Three days after, we were all seized upon by a party of Arabs, stripped e-tirely naked and taken on camels and on foot seven days journey into the de-Lee. 2; Thomas Loury, William Little, 3; sart of Sahara; our only sustenance a pint of camel's milk and the same quantity of brackish water each per day, changing places and masters e ery day; our skin parched off by the heat of the sun, our flesh mangled by the motion of the camels, our feet lacerated by the snarp flint stones, with insects and vermin gnawing our exposed flesh, and without a tree or even a shrub to sheller us from the damp cold trade winds which prevail at night! Marshal Soult, it is said, has received an invitation to enter into the Russian service, and many other Frenchmen, distinguished peror Alexander to settle in his empire. Several persons who have cultivated the sciences with distinction, have also been invited, settle in Russia. Lacepede, the naturalist, and Chaptal, the chemist, and ex-minister of the interior, have declined the invitation, and are preparing to set out for the U. States .-- . Several other literati, means, it is said to pursue the same destination. Such are the result of the narrow policy, which is warring against every thing and every person, that is distinguished for liberality in France.

appreciated and supported. It has been said by some politicians that this city, extracted from a letter written by the Mexicans are not yet sufficiently advanced in civilization to be susceptible of rational freedom. Alas! how little are these people known or understood. There is not a people under the sun of more mental aptitude than the Mexicans. This homage has been paid to them by every liberal traveller that has visited them. But the present state of I had the honor to be among the members favor: Without foreign assistance, without

It may be asked, if this is the fact, why has not the republican party already fixed the destiny of their country? The answer is plain-it is because they have not been supplied with any munitions of war essential for the operations of a considerable army .-- Almost every musket and pound of powder in their possess on has been taken from armed men by an unarmed multitude. - Shut out from all intercourse by sea with any of the nations of the world, and deprived of any trade (until very recently) either by land or water, coen with the United States, is it not surprising that the revolution has not long ere this been crushnish throne, and I suppose the next thing we ed; and if it has reached the point I have shall hear is a bull from the pope, hurling stated, is there not good ground to believe the thunders of the Vatican against the re- in its speedy and eventual triumph?
