Pains in the Loins, Affections of the Kidneys and Bladder, Loss of Organic Powers, Nervous Arritability, Disease of the Head, Throat, Nose or Skin; and all those Peculiar Disorders arising from a Certain Secret Habit of Youth, which if het cured, produces Constitutional Debility, renders Marriage impossible, and in the end destroys both body and mind.

Young Men.

Young Men.

Young Men.

Young Men especially, who have become the victims of Solitary Vice that dreadful and destructive habit which annually sweeps to an untimely grave thousands of young men of the most exalted talents and brilliant intellect, who might otherwise have entranced listening Senates with the thunders of eloquence, or waked to ecstacy the living lyre, may call with full confidence.

A Cure Warranted or no Charge, in from one to two days:

The many thousands cared at this Institution, and the very extensive practice of Dr. Johnston (exciding all others) is a sufficient guarantee that he is the only proper Physician to be consulted:

Dr. Johnston,

Member of the Royal College of Surgeons; London Graduate from one of the most eminent Colleges of the United States, and the greater part of whose life has been spent in the Hospitals of London, Paris, Philadelphia and elsewhere, has effected some of the most astonishing cures that were ever known. Many troubled with a ringing in the cars and head when asleep, great nervousness, being alarmed at sudden sounds, and bashfulness, with frequent blushing, attended sometimes with derangement of mind; were cured immediately.

A Certain Disease.

When the misguided and impudent votary of pleasure finds he has imbibed the seeds of this painful disease, it too often happens that an ill-timed sense of shame, or dread of discovery, deters him from applying to those who, from education and respectability, can alone befriend him, delaying till the constitutional symptoms of this horrid disease make their appearance, such as ulcerated sore throat, diseased nose, nocturnal pains in the head and limbs, dimness of sight, deafness, nodes on the shin bones and arms, blotches on the head, face, and extremities, progressing on with frightful rapidity, till at last the palate of the mouth or the bones of the nose fall in, and the victim of this awful disease becomes a horrid object of commiseration, till death puts a period to their dreadful sufferings by sending them to "that bourne from whence no traveller returns." To such therefore, Dr. JOHNSTON pledges himself to preserve the most inviolable secrecy, and from his extensive practice in the first hospitals of Europe and America, he can confidently recommend the most safe and speedy cure to the unfortunate victim of this horrid disease.

It is a melancholy fact, that the usands fall victims to this dreadful disease, owing to the unskillfulness or ignorant pretenders, who, by the use of that deadly poison, mercury, ruin the constitution, and either send the unfortunate sufferer to an untimely grave, or makes the residue of his life miserable.

Take Particular Notice.

Dr. J. addresses all those who have injuried theritally serviced the residue of the serviced and the untortunate sufferer to an untimely grave, or makes the residue of his life miserable. A Certain Disease.

Take Particular Notice.

Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured themselves by private and improper indulgences, that secret and solitary habit, which ruin both body and mind, unfiting them for either business or society. These are some of the sad and inclancholy effects pro duced by early habits of youth, viz! Weakness of the Back and limbs, Pains in the Head, Dimness of Sight, Luss of Muscular Power, Palpitation of the Heart, Dispessia, Nervous Irritability, Derangement of the Digestive Functions, General Debility, Symptoms of Con-MENTALLY.—The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded; loss of memory, confusion of ideas, depression of spirits, evil forebodings, aversion to society, self distrust, love of solitude, timidity, &c., are some of the evils produced.

Dr. Johnston's Invigorating Remedy for General Debility.

By this great and important remedy, weakness of the organs are speedily cured, and full vigor restored. Thousands of the most nervous and debilitated, who had lost all hope, have been immediately relieved All impediments to Marriage, Physical or Mental Disqualification, Nervous Irritability, Trembling and Weakness, or Exhaustion of the most fearful kind, are speedily cured.

Who have injured themselves by a Certain Practice, indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school—the effects of which are nightly felt, even when asleep, and if not cured, benders marriage impossible, and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, and the darling of his parents, should be matched from all prospects and enjoyments of life, by the consequences of deviating from the path of hature, and indulging in a certain secret habit.—

Such persons before contemplating Such persons before contemplating

Marriage, should reflect that a sound mind and body are the most hecessary requisites to promote connubial happiness. Indeed, without this, the journey through life becomes a weary pilgrimage; the prospect hourly darkens to the view; the mind becomes shadowed with despair, and filled with the melancholy reflection that the happiness of another becomes blighted with our own.-Weakness of the Organs immediately cured; and full vigor restored.

To Strangers. The many thousands of the most desperate and hopeless cases cured at this institution within the last twelve years, and the numerous important Surgical Operations performed by Dr. Johnston, witnessed by the reporters of the papers and many other persons notices of which have appeared again and again before the public, is a sufficient guarantee to the afflicted. He who places himself under the care of Dr. Johnston the who places himself under the care of Dr. Johnston thay religiously confide in his honor as a Gentleman, and confidently rely upon his skill as a Physician.

There are so many ignorant and worthless Quacks copying Dr. Johnston's advertisement, and advertising themselves as physicians, trifling with and ruining the health of the already Afflicted, that Dr. Johnston deems it necessary to say especially to those unacquainted with his ceputation that his cre-Anose unacquainted with his ceputation that his cre-deutisis or diplomas always hang in his Office, ALL LETTERS MUST BE POST-PAID—REME

Prize Ode to the Greek Slave. BY AUGUSTIN DUGARNE. O Greek! by more than Moslem fetters thralled!
O marble prison of a radiant thought,
Where life is half recalled,
And beauty dwells, created, not enwrought—
Why hanntest thou my dreams, enrobed in light,
And atmosphered with durity, wherein
Mine own soul is transfigured, and grows bright,
As though in angel smiled away its sin?

O chastity of art i

Beliefd this maiden shape makes solitude

Of all the busy mart:

Beneath her son's immeasurable woe,

All sensuous vision lies subdued,

And from her veiled eyes the flow

Of tears, is inward turned upon her heart;

Of tears, is inward turned upon her heart;
While on the prisoning lips
Her eloquent spirit swoons,
And from the lustrous brow's eclipse
Falls patient glory, as from clouded moons!
Secure in vestal grace, yet warm
And flexile with the delicate glow of youth,
She stands, the sweet embodiment of truth;
Her pure thoughts clustering around her form,
Like scraph garments, whiter than the snows
Which the wild sea upthrows.

O Genius! thou caust chain

Not marble only, but the human soul,

And melt the heart with soft control,

And wake such reverence in the brain

That man may be forgiven, If in the ancient days he dwelt Idolatrous with sculptured life, and knelt
To Beauty more than Heaven!

Genins is worship! for its works adore The Infinite Source of all their glorious thought, So blessed Art, like Nature, is o'erfraught With such a wondrous store Of hallowed influence, that we who gaze Aright on her creations, haply pray and praise Go, then, fair Slave ! and in thy fetters teach

What Heaven inspired and Genius hath design'd Be thou Evangel of true Art, and preach The freedom of the Mind ! Autumn Leaves. The autumn leaves! the autumn leaves! They fall and die in the mournful blast, And a strange wild thought my heart conceived.

In their ghost-like echoes of the past.

'Twas thus they fell in years agone—

Thus they will fall as time rolls on, And ever thus man's spirit grieves O'er withered hopes, like autumn leaves. The cold winds sweep the barren fields ... And whistles through the withered grass, The humid earth no fragrance yields,

And days grow chiller as they pass.

Thus human hearts grow chill with years,
Thus human joys are damped in tears, And man distrusts what long deceives And reads his fate in autumn leaves. The autumn fields are bare and chill! Their fragrance gone, their verdure fled; But beauty hangs about them still. Thus may we as we pass away.

In virtue hide the heart's decay, And find in faith what faith believes A gentle fall-like autumn leaves. The autumn leaves! the autumn leaves! They wither, die, and pass away, And mournfully my fancy weaves. But pen cannot transcribe the lay. Soon; soon alike the winter cloud Will spread for them and us the shroud ; And peace to him whose heart receives The lesson taught by falling leaves.

The Newly Married, or a Good Lesson. BY MRS. EMELINE P. PLUMMER. 'Oh dear! this weather is cold enough for November,' said Mr. Ashton, 'I wish wife, you would order some fire made. I cannot keep a limb of my body still. 'Well,' said the wife, 'I think that would be superbly ridiculous to have my grates soiled after they had been cleaned so nicely, and my summer blowers up.'

'Oh, nonsense! what are the grates made for but to use? If they are so very nice, why cover them up with these blowers?' But the wife remained immovable and in-

'Say, Emily, may I ring the bell, and order 'No, no,' quickly interposed his wife. 'I have just got my rooms cleaned for the summer, and I will not have them touched.' 'Cleaned for the summer! I wish I could live in a place where they would consider it a crime to clean a house more than once in twelve years. 'Then I should be more particular than I now am,' said Emily, 'for fear I might get poisoned before my time came. Men seem not to have any perception of dirt. It is fortunate that somebody has.' 'I don't care, it is unreasonable to close up the fire-frames so soon,' muttered her hus . What! at this season of the year-almost

'Ah! good morning, Mr. Norris,' said Mr. and Mrs. Ashton; when did you arrive?' 'About an hour ago,' replied the visitor .-This is very singular weather for June,' he continued; 'it is more like November.' 'It is indeed. I have been telling wife that we ought to have a good coal fire. Emily, dear, don't you think I had better ring the bell and order a fire ? Emily frowned, and cast an impatient look at her husband. Mr. Norris quickly read the

'Oh, I am hot cold,' protested Mr. Norris with shivering limbs; 'do not have a fire built for me. I have called rather early, I am already aware—hope you will excuse me—but as I had some particular business with Mr. Ashton, I concluded you might be at home at this hour.'

'I am glad to see you,' said Mr. Ashton.

'After a short time, Mr. Norris took his

'For my part, I was glad to see Norris,' said Mr. Ashton, 'as well as mortified at the cool reception we gave him. Poor fellow! he had the blue shakes when he went out. I must ask him to tea to-morrow. Say shan't I, Emily?' Well, if you must, why you must, I suppose; but or real ar But what? Have you any objection?

What do you think, Emily eh?

At this pleasant turn of affairs, Emily did not make much reply. Mr. Norris was invited to tea; everything to all appearance, passed off well; and Mr. Norris concluded that if he could get married and get such a wife as Mr. Ashton, it would not be such a dreadful thing after all. Everything looked so nice—the ten-service and table cloths especially. It is took things hardness Everything in housekeeping appeared burdensome to her.— She trusted no body; she was continually inding fault. Servants were a continued thorn in her flesh, flies a source of irritation. moths were horrible, and all the daily vexa-tions of life tended to make this a world of tribulation and anguish. This

She had been married about two years, and wanted to be considered an excellent house-

'Well, why don't you dismiss them?' said

Mr. Ashton, impatiently.
What would be the use of that? I cannot do the work. I did not get married to make a slave of myself, or to put my hands out of shape by doing house-work. have nothing fit to put on the table.' Lam very sorry that you have so many trials my dear. Both went to bed with a resolution that nothing should occur to cloud the sky over their matrimonial life. For many times our young wife had contrived as if some real misfortune were hanging over 'What say you, Emily, to giving up house keeping, and going out to board?' said Mr. Ashton, after another chapter of the servants' deficiences, and short comings, and overgrown ideas as to 'what was their place, and what Was not.' 'I should like to try it, at any rate,' continued her 'Why, Mr. Ashton! I thought you wished to feel sad, and make her husband as gloomy

ing but one uninterrupted chain of complaints ever since we were married. Precious little comfort do I see! These remarks sank heavily into the heart of the young wife, and she coud not refrain from weeping passionately over them when she was alone. One day while coming over the ills of life, she said : 'I know what I'll do; I'll just run over

'In the first place, the object of good house keeping is comfort, and comfort implies quiet and east. Always try and have everything pleasant for your husband. If you have any trials of a trivial nature, never mention them. With youth, health, means, and last, though not least, a husband that you dearly love, what right have petty trials to intervene be-tween you and happiness? Oh, well, but I have the worst domestics in the world! They will not let me instruct them at all; and nothing is done as I should 'I think I heard you say, not long since, that they were very neat and prompt,' said Mrs. Wilson. . Oh, yes; but they will not let me command them at all. I cannot exercise any dignity whatever in my own house.' Do not exact too much, said Mrs. Wilson. Don't you think, by your own short experience, that perfect obedience is the most diffi-cult of hunden virtues? Well, perhaps so, said Emily. But how is it that you take everything so easily, Mrs. 'By keeping a general superintendelice; by not interfering too much with my servants, encouraging them when I have an opportunity, and sympathizing with them in their trials; n short, by endeavoring to make everything as pleasant as possible by an even course daily with my husband and servants. Don't let little difficulties grow into larger ones. You will find them much easier to conquer. One

Mr. Ashton soon observed the change, and, with great delight, remarked that he did not envy a mun his 'single blessedness,' while he had such a sure resource for crushed spirits-a pleasant wife, and, in short, a happy home.

A Shifty Judge.

A short time since they had a queer case for Circuit Judge in the Western District of Tennessee. He was a good lawyer, but cared nothing for appearances, and less for dress.—
The latter he knew nothing about, it being entirely left to Betty, his wife. His Betty was bsent from home once when he started around on the circuit, leaving the Judge to pack his clothes for the trip. He did so, but instead of finding his shirts, he seized on a pile of his wife's what-you-call-ems, used for a like puroose. A learned brother who roomed with im, was much amused a few mornings after, at the queer appearance of the Judge, nothing being in sight but his head arms and feet, his looks of bewilderment and his sotto voice reflections, which were, 'I wonder what on earth made Betty cut off my sleeves!' It is probable that he heard the reason the next time has saw Betty, but not before, as the bar kept dark on the matter (to him) that round.

"Hold your tongue for a fool," said an rishman to his wife. "Then you'll be after peaking yoursell;" was the cutting reply.

This speech was addressed to a lovely girl scarcely eighteen, beautiful as the lily that hides itself beneath the dark waters. She wanted to be considered an excellent house-keeper. So she was, so far as neatness and punctuality were concerned; but, when we consider comfort and happiness in another point of view, she missed it decidedly. When her husband came home, she would commence repeating in detail all her little trials with her domestics during the day, with lier domestics during the day, with lier domestics during the day, with lier domestics during the should not live long, and he might see whom he would get

'What did you say?' interrupted the father; a boy! have I a grandchild? Why Ellen I never knew that before! but I think it's likely. Well, now give me my chocolate, and then go to your music lesson,

Ellen left him. The old man's heart began 'Well,' he went on, 'Charles was always a good boy, a little wild or so at College, but I in-dulged him; and he was always good to his old father, for all, but he disobeyed me by marrying this poor girl; yet as my old friend and fellow-soldier, Tom Bonner used to say, we must forgive. Poor Tom I would give all my old shoes I have got, to know what ever become of him. If I could but find him or one of his children! Heaven grant they are not suffering! This plaguy smokey room, how my eyes water! If I did but know who this girl was that my Charles has married; but I have never inquired her name. I'll find out Ellen led into the room a beautiful boy, about two years old. His curly hair and rosy cheeks could not but make one love him. 'Who is that?' said the old man, wiping

'That that is Charles' boy,' said Ellen, throwing one of her arms around her father's neck, while with the other she placed the child on his knee. The child looked tenderly up in his face and lisped out: 'Grandpa, what makes you cry so?' The old man clasped the child to his bosom kissed him again and again. After this emotion had a little subsided, he bade the child tell his name.

'Thomas Bonner Wheatly,' said the boy I am named after grand-pa. 'What do I hear?' said the old man. Thomas Bonner your grandfather? 'Yes,' lisped the boy, 'and he lives with

'Get me my cane,' said the old man, 'and come Ellen; be quick, child.' They started off at a quick pace, which soon brought them to the poor, though neat odgings of his son: There he beheld his old friend, Thomas Bonner, seated in one corner, weaving baskets, while his swarthy limbs showed how unable he was to perform his necessary task. His lovely daughter, the wife of Charles, was preparing their frugal meal, and Charles was out seeking employment to support his needy family. 'It's all my fault,' sobbed the old man as he embraced his friend, who was petrified with

It was then, as it is in a greater or less degree still, the practice among the farmers to lodge wayfaring poor; and as the farmer's room is often but small, and the characters of such random guests are sometimes doubtful, they are furnished with blankets and straw in some of the out-houses. where, however, they are comfortably sheltered. Is there not, in the simple language of this poor wanderer, the distinct recognition of the doctrine of the Trinity, and of the mediatorial work of the Saviour, together with his Divinity, as that 'Aue o' Three,' to whom the simple soul committed itself in full confidence that, in his own appropriate language, he will save me?' It reminds us of the Saviour's striking language ! I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Young Ladies.
[From the New York Observer.]

In mental culture custom commonly allows to woman far fewer advantages than are enjoyed by men. Girls are sent to school and taught the elementary branches; but earnest endeavors after further improvement usually ceases much too soon. This state of things has been partly induced by a fear of being esteemed strong-minded! a term which has passed into disrepute by the follies and excesses of a class of females, who seem to have forgotten their proper positions. Prompted by their ambition and such like motives her great weakness. The conduct of such is repugnant to the mind of a refined and mo-dest female, and induces her to pursue an opposite course. But as in every thing else, so here there may be fanation. To give up all that is liable to abuse is to surrender whatever is valuable. If some women have overstepped the limits which religion and good sense have prescribed for them, is it necessary that others more feminine should withdraw from all attempts at mental improvement. By such a course they consign common privileges to the abuse of a few.—

It is to be regretted that so many young ladies, as soon as free from the discipline of school, quite pertermit their studies. The plea urged is the necessity of relaxation.— Admitting that the health may have suffered by confinement in over-heated and ill-ventilated rooms, yet is it wise now to avoid a moderate use of books? Mental stagnation is as bad as protracted excitement. A bow never drawn is as useless as one over-ous than general ignorance." Aim at thoroughness in learning. not superficial. One of the best English poets says—

"A little learning is a dangerous thing, Drink deep or taste not the Pierian spring." There is a time for all our duties. - Female studies should not be pursued to the exclusion of domestic employments. A woman should early learn how to make home happy. She should prepare herself for the duties and trials of the future. It is well known that an illustrious woman of France being asked by Napoleon what was wanted to make her country great, replied, "Mothers." Perseverance and punctuality will enable the earnest student to attend to domestic cares. and to have some time which can be particularly devoted to a systematic course of reading. Every hour thus spent will tell for itself, and a pleasurable surprise at the progress made can-

There is no lack in our day of a style of literature which can at best please but for the moment. To read such works requires no mental effort, and is generally productive of evil only. It is a sinful abuse of time to spend hours and days over novels, while the mind is starving for want of nourishment. Confine not your reading to any one class of writers. Such works as demand the severest thought, if constantly perused, will overtax the faculties, and result in weariness. Mingle the light a heavy, the pleasant and the severe. In select g secure the direction of some comdetent counsellor. Remember it is more difficult to unlearn than to learn, and be careful to make a judicious choice of studies in the first

Always be ready to yield an opinion when convinced of its error, and never be unwilling to hear the opposite side of every question. The free but careful use of the pen is well adapted to strengthen and discipline the mind. Writing out your thoughts will enable you to correct the manner of expressing them, and thus a copious and graceful use of language will be acquired. Bacon said, "Reading maketh

a full man, speaking a ready man, and writing a correct man." It is no disgrace to quit studies too abstruse for one's understanding, and engage in others. To act otherwise would be a waste of time.-Knowledge can often be obtained from persons of little education. Never be prevented by the fear of exposing your ignorance from seek-ing information of well-informed persons.

Be not discouraged on viewing the vast work before you. My Lord Verulam said: "Of knowledge there is no satiety, but satisfaction and appetite are perpetually interchangeable." Sir Isaac Newton remarked: "The man who comes after me may know something :" and, "I stand upon the shore of the sea of knowledge, and all I have done is to gather some pebbles." William Wirt wrote, "Take it for granted that there is no great eminence without great A persevering spirit shall succeed. Nor should it dishearten us that we are apt soon to forget what we have learned, for lost knowledge is easily recovered: Let young women cultivate their minds and so use all their powers for the good of men and the honor of God: they will then be surprised at the amount of their influence for good. E. S. R. Humboldt.

Among the brilliant corps of scientific men who adorn Europe at the present day is one acknowledged chief, who towers over all others. This is the venerable Alexander Von Humbold who at the age of four-score and five years, still prosecutes with vigor and success his researches in the broad domains of science. A writer in Blackwood's Magazine thus describes the eminent philosopher: the that evides a new time 'Age—it's slightly upon his active head.'— Still full of recorded facts and thoughts, he labors daily in committing them to the page; for the grave he tells you, waits him early now, and he must finish what he has to do before he dies. And yet he is as full, at the same time, of the discoveries and new thoughts of others, and as eager, as the young student of Nature gathering up fresh threads of knowledge, and in following the advances of the various departments of natural science. And in so doing it is characteristic of his generous mind to estimate highly the labors of others, to encourage the young and aspiring investigator, to whatever department of Nature he may be devoted, and to aid him with his counsel, his influence and his sympathy. We found him congratulating himself on the posession of a power with which few scientific men are gifted, that of making science popular of drawing to himself, and to the knowledge he had to diffuse, the regard and attention of the masses of the people in his own and other countries, by a clear method and an attractive

Humboldt resides in Berlin. He is represented as having a lofty, massive brow, which as it overarches his reflecting, observing eyes, seems at first sight almost too large for the dimensions of the body and the general size of them itself. His massive chin is indicative of a rare tenacity of purpose, of a perseverance which, for a long life has enabled him unceasingly to real long life has enabled him unceasing life. ingly to augment the accumulated knowledge of his wide experience, and as continuously to strive to spread it strong.

Cromwell died in the plentitude of his power and greatness. He had succeeded beyond all expectation; far more than any other of those men had succeeded, who, by their genius, have raised themselves, as he had done, to supreme authority; for he had attempted and accomplished, with equal success, the most opposite designs. During eighteen years, that he had been an ever-victorious actor on the world's stage, he had alternately sown disorder and established order, effected and punished revolution, over-thrown and restored government in his country. At every monient, under all circumstances, he had distinguished, with admithable sagacity; the dominant interests and passious of the time, so as to make them the instruments, of his own rule, careless whether he belied his antecedent conduct, so long as he triumphed in concert with the popular instinct, and explaining the inconsistencies of his conduct by the accudant unity of his power. He is, perhaps, the only example which history affords of one man having governed the most opposite events, and proved sufficient for the most various destinies. And in the ly exposed to all kinds of enemies and consuractes, Cromwell experienced this crowning favor of fortune, that his life was never actually attacked; the sovereign against whom killing had been declared to be no murder, never found himself face to face with an assassin. The world has never know another example of success at once so constant and so various, or of fortune so lifeariably favorable, in the midst of such manifold conflicts and perils.

Yet Cromwell's death bed was clouded with gloom: He was unwilling not only to die, but also, and Yet Cromwell's death-hed was clouded with gloom:
He was unwilling not only to die, but also, and most of all, to die without having attained his real and final object. However great his egotism may have been, his soul was too great to rest satisfied with the highest fortune, if it were mere personal, and, like himself, of ephemeral earthly duration.—
Weary of the ruin he had caused, it was his cherish-Weary of the ruin he had caused, it was his cherished wish to restore to his country a regular and stable government—the only government which was suited to its wants, a monarchy under the control of Parliament. And at the same time, with an ambifical which extended beyond the grave, under the influence of that thirst for permanence which is the stamp of true greatness, he aspired to leave his name and race in possession of the throne. He failed in both designs; his crime had raised up obstacles against him, which neither his prudent genius nor his persevering will could surmount; and tho' covered, as far as he himself was concerned, with power and glory, he died with his dearest hopes frustrated and leaving behind him, as his successors, the two eneleaving behind him, as his successors, the two enemies whom he had so ardently combatted—anarchy and the Stuarts .- Guizot. Who is Doesticks? A few hints for mental culture may not be unacceptable here. Think as well as read, reflect as well as acquire notions. Excessive reading hinders the best exercise of our own faculties, especially those of taste and judgment. Plato well said "that a mass of ill-digested information is much more dangerous than general ignorance."

Who is Doesticks?

Applications have been made to us for the address of Doesticks by three several publishers who want him to write their a book, or get up something for them that will sell in these hard times; and several gentlemen have flattered us by assurance that they took our paper exclusively for the privilege of rending his communications. This is an attention to which we are not fairly entitled. We have copied all we have published from the Detroit Advertiser, where, with a single exception all originally appeared.

Doesticks is a modest young clerk in this city whose life thus far has only spanned some twenty-three years, and he is disinclined at present, to part with his anonymous obscurity. He has nothing to offer the publishers at present, and when he has, if ever he thinks it will be time enough to reveal his whereabouts and whatabouts. He is not looking to literature as a profession, sees no literary merit in what he has done, writes to the Advertiser to oblige a vonnger brother who is connected with that journal. and for no other object. He was one of the students of Michigan University who were expelled some years ago under the decree issued against secret societies in that institution. His father is a lawyer of some rank at Ann Arbor, Michigan.

"Doesticks on a Bender" was the first of the series that was published. It was written in a private letter to a friend, who gave it to the editor of the Peninsular Quarterly and University Magazine—a periodical published at Ann Arbor, which had a brief but creditable existence—where it first appeared, and from whence it found its way to a more numerous, if not a more appreciative class of readers, through the columns of the Evening Post. The attention which it attracted led to the publication of others, until now fourteen have appeared. They all contain passages of wit and humor which linger in the memory and display powers of observation from which much may yet be expected.—N. Y. Evening

Faithful Forever. It is a dear delight for the soul to have trust in the faith of another. It makes a pillow of softness for the cheek which is burning with tears and the touch of pain. It is an undeferred seclusion into which the mind, when weary of sadness, may retreat for a caress of constant love—a warmth in the clasp of frendship, forever lingering on the hand—a consoling voice that dwells with an eternal echo on in ear-a dew of mercy falling on the troubled hearts of held; descend sometimes as chastening griefs upon our nature, but there is no solace for the bitterne s of Like the Angels.

Why! you would have me like the angels;

exclaimed a young girl to whom a friend had been talking. Truly would we have women like the angels. And why not? Is it any harm to be like an angel? We read that they are very beautiful—full of love, truth, purity, compassionate, sinless. Are these forbidden traits ! Angels slander not each other. They liave no circles in their glorious home where characters are picked to pieces. Angels never wreathe the face with smiles when envy is gnawing the very heart-strings in twain. Angels never rejoice over the downfall of another. Angels lure not with the eye, and then coldly cast off with the lip. Angels suffer not passion to paint the brow dark with discontent and hatred. Would you not wish, eventually, to become angels? or does this thought never enter with the multitude that cross the mind's threshold? Why not prepare then for this high destination? Why not discipline the sublime thoughts and beautiful in good deeds? Cultivate your affections, be pure in thought, gentle in spirit. Banish forever deception, evil speaking, inordinate love of pleasure! Why not become as near as you may be, angels on earth? Ah! young ladies, believe us when we tell you there is no harm in trying to be like the Vicissitudes of Fortune: A writer in the London Economist, sums up very able article on Napoleon III, as follows: a The same man who landed at Boulogne in 1840, with a single steamer and a few friends, on a desperate and abortive expedition, revisits it in 1854, to review a vast army and receive the holmage of countless spectators. The saille man who six years ago lived in obscurity in London, scarcely able to pay his tailor's, and quite unable to pay his orse dealer's bill-whom many looked upon as stilpid; and whom none looked upon as wise, of whom few augured well, and whom few would trust much, we have just seen receive ing the visits and compliments of the consort of our Queen, entertaining three royal guests at his table, one of them the son-in-law of the very monarch whom he had succeeded and admitted beyond all denial into the social circle of royal personages. Nor is this change in his singular fortunes the only one, nor perhaps the greatest. We can imagine him sm ing with even a more grim satisfaction as he contrasts the language of the English press regarding him in 1852 and now; sitting with the Times, or the Examiner, of Decen ber, 1851, or of August, 1854, before him and marvelling at the metamorphosis, the new measured abuse which was showered upon him at the former date, and the decorous respect and cordial praise with which Leis spoken of now. The 'swell' and the 'sanguinary and audacious ruffian' is now the polite and sagacious Emperor, and tere-a-tete with Prince Albert and King Leopold."

AN EIGHT DAYS' FIGHT. Although no general action was fought from the 5th October to the 5th November, the eilit days veen these two dates are described as an incesant combat. It is reported that Lord Ragian has suspended the Earl of Cardigan from his command for rashness, in the charge which proved so disastrous at Balakkava. A French general exclaimed, when he witnessed the charge of the cavalryc'est tres magaifique mais ce n'est pas la guerre in-" That is a very magnificent sight; but it is not HOT WORK. The Light Brigade still kept sweeping on till they were right in front of thein, when a 32-pounder went off within two feet of Lord Cardigan's horse, quite lifting him off the ground-but he got in among them, and was, where he always will be when it come to the point, in the first rank. It seems they rode right through the guns and turned after ing the men who were serving them. His Lordship's extra aide-de-camp, it is supposed, was wounded and taken prisoner, for he has not since been heard of. Mr. Woundwell, of the 17th Lancers, had a most extraordinary escape, showing a mon-strous deal of pluck. His horse was—it is said two were-shot under him, and he was taken prisoner,but while being marched off he saw an opportunity, mounted a Russian's horse, and galloped back, re-joining some of his brigand who had reformed, and charging again with sword or pistol. A RUN FOR LIFE.

Mr. Cook, of the 11th, also had a regular run for his life of a mile and a bair, pursued by the Russian eavalry, to avoid whom he ran under range of the gans of one of their batteries, and finally escaped.— Major Clark, of the Grays, in addition to a bad cut in the neck, and his horse's tail almost cut off by a abre cut; and I hear the gallant Adjutant Miller, an unusually powerful man, did extraordinary execution when he got to close quarters with them. Lord Cardigan was attacked by two Cossacks, who with their lances gave him several pricks, and rather staggered him in his saddle; but his Lordship's being well mounted, and a good cross country rider, and, moreover, as cool as brave men ever are in real danger, parried their thrusts, and escaped with the aforesaid lance-pricks in his leg.

THE FIGHT OF THE BRIGADE. more fearful spectacle was never witnessed than by those who, without the power to aid, beheld their heroic countrymen rushing to the arms of death. At the distance of 1,200 yards the whole line of enemy belched forth, from thirty iron mouths, a flood of smoke and flame, through which hissed the deadly balls. Their flight was marked by instant gaps in our ranks, by dead men and horses, by steads flying wounded or riderless across the

THE HAVOC: The first line is broken, it is joined by the second they never halt or check their speed an instant; with inished ranks, thinned by those 30 guns, which the Russians had laid with the most deadly accuraer with a halo of flashing steel above their heads, and with a cheer which was many a noble fellows' death-cry, they flew into the smoke of the batteries, but ere they were lost from view the plain was strewed with their bodies and with the carcasses of horses. THE RUSSIAN LANCERS.

Wounded men and dismounted troopers fiving towards us told the sad tale-demi gods could not have done what we have failed to do. At the very moment when they were about to retreat an enormous mass of lancers was hurled on their flank .-Colonel Shewell, of the 8th Hussars, saw the danger, and rode his men straight at them, cutting his way through with fearful loss. The other regiments turned and engaged in a desperate encounter. THE WOUNDED.

Oct. 26.-To-day numbers of the wounded were on board different ships in Balaklava harbor. and a most mournful sight it was to see the poor fellows carried down on stretchers, some minus a leg, others an arm; one with his face battered to pieces, another with a sabre cut at the back of his head. BATTLE FIELD SCENES.

I cannot conceive a more splendid sight than was witnessed during this afternoon, the two armies, the Russians being enormously strong, and our own, waiting for one or the other to advance, with an occasional shell by way of invitation or challenge .-But for several hours there they stood, as if content with what had already taken place, and we are so near the two, that with the aid of my glass I could distinctly see the color of their uniform, (gray.) and their standard, with an eagle on the top of it; I could also plainly see the dead, both men and horses, on the scene of the late encounter. I observed one horse stand fully an hour by the side of his dead rider, while others were wildly galloping about, not knowing which way to turn their riderless course.

VIRTUE IN STONES. Our riflemen annoy their gunners greatly, and prevent the Russian tirailleurs from showing near our batteries. On one occasion the Russian riflemen and our own men came close upon each other in a quarry before the town. Our men had exhausted ill their amunition; but as soon as they saw the Russians they seized the blocks of stone which were lying about, and opened a vigorous volley on the enemy. The latter either had empty pouches, or were so much surprised they forgot to load, for they resorted to the same missiles. A short fire ensued, which ended in our favor, and the Russians retreated, pelted vigorously as long as the men could pur-

THE VALLEY OF DEATH. The coolness of a young artillery officer, named Maxwell, who took some ammunition to the batteries through a tremendous fire, along a road so exposed to the enemy's fire, that it has been called "the Valley of Death," is highly spoken of on all sides. The blue jackets are highly delighted with Captain Peel, who animates the men by the exhibition of the best qualities of an officer. When the Union Jack in the sailors' battery was shot away, he seized the broken staff, and leaping upon the earthworks, waved the old bit of bunting again and again in a storm of shot, which fortunately left him untouched.

THE IRISH WOMEN AND THE TURKS. Whenever during the day you saw any of the Turkish soldiers, you saw the people hooting them and calling them cowards and runaways. I witnessed two Irish women actually driving four of these chivalrous gentry before them, making them carry some things for them, probably to their own wounded husbands, and saying, "Eh! you cowardly divils, this is all you're fit for, to be our servants; sure, Tou are afraid to fight;" and on our return I saw a young middy drawn up before some fifty of them, busing them most heartily for their having ruaaway. One of them made a sign as if he was going to draw his sword, when master middy sang out "Oh," said he, "I'm not afraid of you, such a set of cowards as you are," set his arms a kimboo, and then stood, the picture of a young lion, and, I should say, about as brave. Lord Ragian, after the Gravs' charge, sent a message down to be told to the men, that he had never seen anything more brilliant or more gallantly executed.

SHAMEFUL CONDUCT OF THE TURKS. Had our Turkish friends only spiked the guns before deserting them it would have been less disastrous but that our own guns should be made use of, with: our own ammunition against us, and that through the cowardly conduct of these men, for whom we are sacrificing England's best blood and treasure, is too provoking and discreditable to write about, and I am sorry to say that, not content with deserting their post, they plundered everything they could lay their hands on, even to the very breakfast which some men of the Grays were preparing for their of-ficers, who were then out in face of the enemy. The universal feeling is, that a very severe example should be made of this flagrant act of cowardice, the probable result of which will be another hard fought battle, with a possibility of evacuating Balak-

ENTERTAINMENT FOR MAN AND HORSE. Salt is a luxury which is rarely to be had unless In conjunction with porky fibre, and as to milk and butter, the very taste of them is forgotten. Lord Raglan was very glad to get a little cold pig, (pork) and ration of rum and water, one night on our march here. However, the hardest lot of all is reserved for our poor horses. All hay rations for baggagers are rigidly refused, they only receive a few pounds of indifferent barley. There is not a blade of grass to be had-the whole of these plateaux and hills are covered with thistles only, and where the other covering of the earth goes I know not.

COMING TO CLOSE QUARTER Oct. 22.- The enemy seemed more afraid of our Lancasters this morning, and we are told they are drawing over towards the French. The latter became more vigorous in their fire, and are doing marked damage on the left of their line, Their energy in working the new parallels is rapidly producing its results, and their works are creeping up hour after bour to the enemy's walls. The steamer Vladimir came up to the head of the harbor, and opened fire on the right attack of our men. She threw her shells with beautiful accuracy, and killed two men and rounded twenty others, ere we could reply effectually. Our men also commenced a new battery, to be armed with 32 pounders, to fire on the shipping below. The site of this is on the left of, and in front of, the left attack, and it will not be further than 550 yards from the place. This is good distance for red not shot, and great things are expected from it. A 'SELL' BY THE RUSSIANS. The Russians opened a heavy cannonade on us this morning; they always have done so on Sundays,-Divine service was performed with continued bass of cannon rolling through the responses and liturgy.—

The French terribly cut up by the Garden Battery, more so, however, by their misfortune of last night. issians made a stealthy sortie towards morning, and advanced close to the French pickets. When challenged, they replied, "Inglis, Inglis," which passes muster with our alies as bona fide English they say, and ere they knew where they were, the Russians had charged them, got into their batteries and spiked five mortars. They were speedily repulsed; but this misadventure has mortified our brave allies exceedingly. The night before they fired on a party of men who used the same passe parlout, and they turned out to be Russians. They were too confiding

Many poor women and children have lost their lives in this terrible cannon-ade. It seems incredible that the Russian authorities should have let them it is in the town, when the should have let them it is in the town, when they could have easily sent mem scross by the bridge of boats to the north side. Provisions still continue plenty, and water is abundant in the town.

AN ALARM. Sir Golin Campbell, who was in command of Ba-laklava, had drawn up the ninety-third Highlanders a little in front of the road to the town, at the first news of the advance of the enemy.' The marines on the heights got under arms; the seamen's batteries and marines' batteries on the heights, close to the town, were manned, and the French artillerymen and the Zonaves prepared for action along their lines. Lord Lucan's little camp was the scene of great excitement. The men had not time to water their horses; they had not broken their fast from the evening of the day before, and had barely saddled at the first blast of their sates. dled at the first blast of the trumpet, when they were drawn up on the slope behind the redoubts in front of their camp to operate on the enemy's squadrons. BAD CONDUCT OF THE TURES. It was soon evident that no reliance was to be placed on the Torkish infantry or artillerymen. All the stories we had heard about bravery behind stone wall and earthworks, proved how the same or differ-ent people fight under different circumstances.— When the Russians advanced the Turks fired a few When the Russians advanced the Turks fired a few rounds at them, got frightened at the distance of their supports in the rear, looked round, received a few shots and shell, and then "bolted" and fled with an agility quite at variance with commonplace notions of Oriental deportment on the battle field.—But the Turks on the Danube are very different between the common place and the common place are the common place are the common place and the common place are the comm ings from Turks in the Crimea, as it appears that the Russians of Sevastopol are not at all like the Russians of Sillistria.

THE RUSSIAN ADVANCE. Looking to the left towards the gorge, we beheld six compact masses of Russian infantry which had just debouched from the mountain passes near the Tehernaya, and were slowly advancing with solemn stateliness up the valley. Immediately in their front was a regular line of artillery, of at least 20 pieces strong. Two batteries of light guns were already a mile in advance of them, and were playing with entertainty the results of state purific of smoke. ergy on the redoubts, from which feeble puffs of smoke came at long intervals. Behind these guns in front of the infantry were enormous bodies of cavalry.— They were in six compact squares—three on each flank, moving down enechelon towards, us, and the valley was lit up with the blaze of their sabers and lance points, and gay accourrements.

STIRRING SPECTACLE. In their front, and extending along the intervals between each battery of guns, were clouds of mounted skirmishers wheeling and whirling in the front of their march like autumn leaves tossed by the wind. The Zouaves close to us were lying like tigers at the spring, with ready rifles in hand, hidden chin deep by the earth works which run along the line of these ridges on our rear, but the quick-eved Russians were manœuvering on the other side of the va'ley, and did not expose their columns to attack. Below the Zouaves we could see the Turkish gunners in the redoubts, all in confusion as the shot burst over them. Just as I came up, the Russians had carried No. 1 redoubt, the farthest and most elevated of all, and their horsemen were chasing the Turks across the interval which lay between it and redoubt No. 2.

ANOTHER FIGHT OF THE TURKS. At that moment, the cavalry, under Lord Lucan, were formed in glitteriog masses; the light brigade under Lord Cardigan, in advance; the heavy brigade under Brigadier General Scarlett, in reserve. They were drawn up just in front of their encampment, and were concealed from the view of the enemy by a slight "wave" in the plain. Considerably to the rear of their right the 93d Highlanders were drawn up in line, in front of the approach to Balaklava,-More behind them, on the heights, the marines were visible through the grass, drawn up under arms, and the gunners could be seen ready in the earthworks, in which were placed the heavy ship's guns. The 93d had originally been advanced somewhat more into their own guns, and inflicted some injury, and Sir Colin Campbell "retired" his men to a better position.

Meantime the enemy advanced his cavalry rapidly To our inexpressible disgust we saw the Turks in redoubt No. 2 fly at their approach. They ran in scattered groups across towards redoubt No. 3, and towards Balaklava, but the horses hoof of the Cossack was too quick for them, and sword and lance were basily plied along the retreating herd. The vells of the pursuers and pursued were plainly audible. As the lancers and light cavalry of the Russians advanced they gathered up their skirmishes with great speed and in excellent order-the shifting trials of men, which played over the valley like moonlight on the water, contracted, gathered up, and the little peloton in a few moments became a solid column .-Then up came their guns, in rushed their gunners to the abandoned redoubt, and the guns of No. 2 redoubt soon played with deadly effect upon the dispirited defenders of No. 3 redoubt. Two or three shots in return from the earthworks, and all is silent.

WASHINGTON CITY, Nov. 24, 1854. The House of Selden, Withers & Co., has this day expired by its own limitation. Persons who will doubtless be satisfactory to the public will remain in the Banking House to settle its affairs. The warmest gratitude is felt by the late partners for the generous indulgence which has been extended by the public amidst the troubles which have lately brought the House to this painful step. But let all be assured that every effort will be promptly made to satisfy the claimants in a just and impartial Messrs. W. Selden, L. P. Bayne and John A. English will attend to settle with the creditors, whose confidence they hope to merit. WM. SELDEN JNO. WITHERS,

L. P. BAYNE G. WO CARLYLE WHITING. Notice.- To prevent the above notification from being construed by the public so as to create a liability on the part of the undersigned, W. SELDEN, not contemplated by the parties, as shown by the following copy of a contract between them, viz: WASHINGTON CITY, Nov. 24, 1854.

In the public notice which bears date to-day, and which has been directed to appear in the papers to-morrow, announcing the expiration of the house of Selden, Withers & Co., it is hereby understood and agreed by the undersigned, that neither that notice, nor any action of WM. The undersigned, W SELDEN, avers he sold his entire interest in house of Selden, Withers & Co., with the consent of its members, to Mr. Whiting on the 7th day of June, 1852, since which time he has had no interest in the profits nor voice in the management of the concern. The Remedy for Hard Times. A New York paper gives the following advice as applicable to the "hard times:"

"In these tight times, when Wall street is like one's mouth after eating persimmons, when rents fall fifty per cent. and the "safest" men are shaking, it behooves all small dealers to look sharp to their ac counts. Let them owe no man, if they are so unfortunate as to be thus far out of debt, and be quite sure, too, that no man owes them, except that his debt be secured by the most undoubted security.—
For in these times whoever has lent is around looking up the borrower with the most assiduous perseverance, and it is distressing to note how many horrowers are not at home when such call. Let the ornaments go unbought this season. Let the amusements be forsworn. Let the coat-we talk to un pretending people—be coarser than last year; and, ladies, let the bonnet be a dollar or two plainer.— Put what you mean to spend for a wreath in the coal bin, and what you designed for a velvet that should surpass Mrs. Smith's, into the flour barrel. Be hard up for weeks together; wear a patch on your gar-ment; wear a napless hat; eat chesp joints instead " fine" ones; get surloin instead of porter use steaks; rent a second floor instead of a whole house; live comfortably instead of keeping up appearances; do anything that is honest mind whether it is "respectable"-rather than such times as these to run in debt." Trans-Alleghany Bank. In reference to this Bank, the notes of which are under suspicion at distant points, the last South-Western Advocate, published at Jeffersonville Year-well county, where the Bank is located, says: "The Trans-Alleghary Bank of Va., is sharing the lot of all the Banks of the State, but more especially those usually denominated Independent Banks. In the absence of more profitable employment, brokers are endeavoring to crowd their circulation on them. so as to force into market the stocks on which they are based, in the hope that they can now buy at a cheap rate what they will sell in January or Feb-ruary at a handsome profit, and so realize a consid-erable sum in addition to what they can make by buying the notes in a depreciated condition. Iu another column we place a report to the Executive of the condition of the Trans-Alleghamy Bank on the 1st of October last, from which any one may judge of the value of its paper. Every note presented at its counter thus far has been paid; and though our opinion is but the opinion of an individual, yet we will take the liberty of adding that if any of our subscribers in arrears to us feels like paying, the notes of the Trans-Allegbany Bank will be received thankfully and without hesitation. We give below extracts from the Richmond Enquirer and Lynbhburg Virginian nian in support of our own views on this subject."

My Patent Premium Threshing, Separating, Cleaning and Bagging Grain Machine, is for sale, which received the first premium at the Crystal Palace, New York, over all Threshing, Separating, Cleaning and Bagging Grain Machines on exhibition—thus proving conclusively that simplicity in construction, cheapness in price, and durability in my machine, is being fully appreciated, and the old and new costly, inferior, complicated separating Machines must y-ild their places to a superior Labor Saving Machine. 'As for what has been stated in the different papers concerning Mr. Zimmerman's Machine receiving the first premium at the Crystal Palace, New York, is false, and not true. It is also stated that Mr. Zimmerman received a number of premiums at .... and other fairs. That I know nothing about —perhaps he did: but it is very easy to win the race, —perhaps he did: Lut it is very easy to win therace, as the boy said when he ran by himself. But my honorable friends, this was not the case at the World's Fair, New York. Mr. Zimmerman had a number of other boys to run with, besides himself, which made the race more difficult for him—so much so, that he, Mr. Zimmerman, was neither the first nor second-so

Mr. Zimmerman, was neither the first nor second—so you may judge where he was.

These are facts that cannot be denied. Farmers wishing to buy the best machine in use, will address JOSEPH GLAZE, Frederick City, Md., who is manufacturing them in the best and most substantial manner and can furnish sny orders at a few days notice. The nomination of Mr. Me-Comas was declared unanimous; but when the question was put to make that of Mr. Wise unanit here were many noes, although the chairman declar-'ed the nomination overwhelmingly carried. The Soldiers of 1812. By reference to another column, it will be seen that a meeting of the surviving Soldiers of 1812, at length they sealed it in the Federal constitution and the representatives of those deceased in Jefferson County, is requested to be held at the Court-House in Charlestown, on the 29th inst., to appoint one or more Delegates to a Convention proposed to to be held in Washington City on the 8th of Januaby. Our County furnished its full quota in that eventful period, and as it is the object of the Convention simply to appeal to the magnanimity and justice of Congress, for some adequate remuneration from the public domain for their service and their hardships, it is hoped the meeting will be fully attended: Several interesting speeches are expected, and a recurrence to the past may call to recollection many incidents of interest to those who have survived, and award a just tribute to those who have departed, many full of years and full of hon-

We hope similar meetings may be held in every County of our State, and most especially in the Counties of our Congressional District. We shall recur to this subject again in our next, and hope, to have opportuity of presenting a list of the names of those who were the Soldiers from Jefferson in the War of '12.

The character of Lady Randolph was played by Master Hooper very creditably, indeed all were pleased with his performance. E. S. Harrell as Lord Randolph, H. D. Beall as Glenslvon, Wm. B. Reed as Young Norval, Geo. W: Shriver as Old Norval; Master English as Anna; played their parts most admirably, taking in consideration the fact that they are all amateurs, being their first efforts on the stage. Indeed none could have failed to be pleased

The tra_edv was followed by the farce of " Rough Diamond," which was well played, our young towns then E. S. Harrell sustaining the part of "Cousin Joe" most admirably, he seemed to be the favorite on all sizes both as Lord Randolph and Cousin Joe, indeed we were surprised at the talent evinced by this young man. Their scenery is very appropriate and bandsomely got up. We are pleased to state that, by the request of several ladies and gentlemen, who could not make it convenient to be present, they will give their second exhibition on Saturday evening, December the 9th.

In this connexion it is due to Jas. W. Beller, Esq. proprietor of " Jefferson Hall" to say that he deserves much credit for his exertions in fitting up his Hall in a style that is not surpassed by that of any in the Valley of Virginia.

The Supper. We were among fifty other of our citizens wh partook of a supper, furnished by J. F. BLE-SING, on Tuesday evening last. Such a supper! A Buck, the finest ever brought to this place, served up in a variety of ways, turkers, ovsters, and all the etceteras, were there in abundance. That every one done his work well is evidenced in the fact that all left the table highly pleased with the entertainment. Sentiments were offered which were happily rest ponded to by several present, and all passed off in - the most agreeable manner. Our pleasure was somewhat marred from the fact that the veteran of the "Free Press" was not present, for "we know's that "he knows" how to appreciate the creature tonforts of this life, if he don't " Know Nothing."-Our friend Blessing has added much to his fame as a caterer to the public taste.

Will Dersecution Triumph ?

The drap of American emancipation witness one achievement, which as a step towards the emancipation of the human mind, outshone all othersan achievement which, blending the names of Virginia and Jefferson, claims for them the gratitude of the Christian, the love of the freeman, and the admiration of the world. That achievement was the first act of entire Religious Freedom of which the world can boast—originated by Thomas Jefferson and passed by the Virginia legislature of 1785. Nor was this act a partial one; but seizing the idea of perfect liberty of conscience in its unmutilated glory they made this act as unlimited as the idea of Deity-as extensive as the human mind itself. In the language of its author, "it comprehends within the Christian and the Mahomedan, the Hindoo and the Infidel of every denomination." Beneath its shade the Heathen fane, the Islam mosque and the Jewish tabernacle may rear their heads in security side by side with the Catholic cathedral, the Mormon temp'e and the Christian church. At one blow it severed the adulterous connection between church and State and destroyed their hideous offspring, persecution. Following in the wake of Virginia the other members of the confederacy sanctioned the principle of entire freedom of conscience, until Our ancestors seemed to have regarded this freedom as absolutely necessary to the very existence of republican institutions. Believing as they did, that the most deplorable of all tyrannies was that of a blar will, religion was most ant to be prostituted to purposes of political advancement; that in a country where personal liberty had the freest range, it was a powerful engine in the hands of dishonest or misguided men, to play on the popular passion, exciting outbreaks and leading to anarchy—they determined to remove the fruitful source of all these evils by keeping the church and State entirely separate, thus relieving religion of the polluting influ-of religion. Moreover, they had before them the mournful but instructive example of other countries. The plains of Europe were still smoking with the blood of martyred millions. From the days of the apostate Justinian to the Jacobin "reign of terror," the history of religion in Europe had been but a history of the English and French guns, and whilst he admits oppression and bloody persecutions.

ence of politics, and politics of the exciting element

So that if there were a hope cherished-fondly devotedly cherished by those stern patriotic repub licans-a hope which had almost grown into a reality with the pairiots of a later day-it was that America, persecution's outcast daughter, might fold within her bosom the presecuted of every sect, age, and clime; that she might stand a living monument to the liberty of conscience " belienth whose shade things might monMer, and round whose summit eternity must play." Will this hope prove vain? popular sentiment instil us with an awful dread that it has. Admitting that the first expression of the popular opinion is frequently corrected by maturer deliteration, yet in this instance it exhibits itself so much like a long smothered flame which is just bursting forth, that we fear that it is from a spirit which though long repressed, will for the present be compro heraditary and functivism native. Are politics and religion any longer separate there? Are not the pulpits desecrated almost daily, and do not ministers of the gospel lead mobs and head riots? It were unpatriotic not to cherish a hope that there will be a reaction in favor of religious liberty.

lute his attar and traffic in his religion may mee with a stern and deserved rebuke: That in the South especially, her brave, generous, and chivalrous sons may vindicate their character as the freemen of America, by refusingt o sacrifice to a narrow and unnatural bigotry what is due, i not to their wisdom to their generosity, if not to their generosity to their justice, if not to their ins-and that those servants of the "Saviour" who pol-

tice to their gralifude. These are our hopes-whether they are doomed to disappointment or not time alone can tell-we more fear than expect it. For when we reflect that the spirit of persecution now appears among us clothed in the same dress, and wielding the same weapons which characterized it through ages past that like the Spanish Inquisition it veils itself in secreey and mystery; that like the Anglo-Irish proscription of Catholicism, it combines with itself a question which appeals most strongly to national prejudice; that thus far it exhibits a bitter spirit of Ulind rage, exciting popular butbreaks and disregarding law and order; that it abswers argument with ridicule and scorn-we must too clearly recognize it as the same monster which has raised on the plains of Europe a monument of human bones, ce mented with blood-whose alter is the axe of the executioner lashed to the cross of Jesus, and whose spire points the road to heaven paved with human bodies and shaded with the pall of death. A spirit which has been at once the curse and characteristic of christianity. Here, as always, its ears are closed to reason and its eyes shut to justice, well may we exclaim with the Irish orator-"To what end do Fargre with the Eigot? a wretch whom no philosophy can bitmabize, no charity soften, no religion reclaim, no miracle convert: a monster, who, red with the fires of hell and bending under the crimes of earth, erects his murderous divinity upon a throne of skulls, and would gladly feed even with a brother's blood, the cannibal appetite of his rejected altar." Such is the character which the bigot has always presented to the true lover of liberty and such is the character he will appear in, in our country too, when emboldened by success, his caution shall become calculation and his sudden outbursts, legislative oppression. And here he meets with may allies, who have not even the palliation of his Ligotry or the excuse of his enthusiasm-many who with zeal for a liberty which they prove that they never understood or appreciated, are the first

And after all, why should America be exempt from the curses of other countries, or why should the eligious sects of America be exempt from the weakness common to these of every other country and age, fanaticism and intelerance?

If the influence of this exemption has been justifi fatal to it than its bitterest enemies would have

ed by any peculiarity in her institutions or inhabi tants; or if the hope was grounded on any peculiarity in her foundation and entancipation-still, fuc's seem to indicate the falsity of the one and the frustration of the other. And if we have been dreamers for three quarters of a centher can we blame any but ourselves if we are somewhat rudely awakened? We tear that many a patriot who is still dreaming will tre long wake to exclaim as Phillips did when contemplating the wors of Catholic Ireland, woes arising not from her catholicism but the persecution of it: "I am thoroughly convinced that the anti-christian connection between Cospel interest than all the ravings of littlelity since the crucifixion. The sublime Creator of our blessed creed never meant it to be the channel of a courtly influence or the source of a corrupt rritate; to associate not to seclude; to call togethe er like the baptismal dove every creed and clime and olor in the universe beneath the spotless wing of ts protection. The union of church and State only onverts good christians into bad statesmen and olltical knaves into pretended christians. It is t best but a foul and adulterous connection, toluting the purity of heaven with the abomination f earth, hanging the tattlers of a political pietr upon he cross of an insulted Saviour. Religion, Holy Religion, ought not, in the words of its founder to be led into temptation!' The hand that holds her chalice should be pure, and the priests of her temple should be spotless as the vestments of their ministry. Rank only de rades, wealth only impoverishes, ornaments but disfi are her. The South Carolina Legislature inet and organ-ized on Monday the 27th, ult., and the Governor transmitted his message. The document is mostly devoted to State matters. His excellency states that the financial distress of the present period is greater than has been experienced at any time since 1837; and opposes the creation of new banks as not being calculated to remedy the evil. He also opposes the abolishment of the millifia system, and recor change in the school system. He thinks the laws relative to free persons of color arriving at the sea ports of the State might be modified so as not to give offence to foreigh governments; and considers that the country should carefully observe treaties, pursue a sound and discreet foreign policy, and avoid the appearance of grasping at any portion of foreign terris tory. He regards the result of the recent election at the North as indicative of a great disturbance o the harmony of the country; counsels calmness moderation and forbearance; and concludes by hoping that the South will discard party jealousies and stand by the Constitution and the Union.

Late from Europe The British mail steamship Africa arrived at New York on Wednesday, bringing Liverpool dates to 18th ultimo, and later intelligence from the Crimea. The advices are interesting and important, and relieve to some extent, the anxiety in relation to the position of the allies before Sevastopol. The stige was progressing slowly, but id the latest dates no decisive result had been reached. A pause appears selfish, irresponsible majority; that in a republic to have ensued in the field fighting, though a di where preferment is dependant entirely on the pop- patch received via Vienna, (which, however, need confirmation,) speaks of a battle in, which the Rus sians lost 9,000 men and the allies suffered severely Both parties are in want of reinforcements; but the besiegers are in the worse condition in this respect. All the mail steamers have been taken up by the British government to be employed as transports to the troops. The allied army before Sevastopol is reduced to 50,000 men. An assault was looked for by both parties, and the Russians were preparing by placing cannon in the streets of the city and fortifying the houses. The horrors of the siege were increased by the ravages of disease and a growing scarcity of water in the city. The English and Russian official despatches in relation to the battle of the 5th had been received. Both parties claim the victory. Prince Menschikoff claims to have spiked a loss of 4,000 men, says that the allied loss was equal to his own. Lord Raglan speaks of the English loss as being very heavy. A number of their general officers were killed or wounded.

The news from the Crimea continued to act unfavorably upon commercial matters in England. Consols had again fallen, and were quoted for the close at 914. Flour had declinee 6d., Wheat 3d., and Corn

And on-still on our column kept Through walls of flame its withering way,
Where fell the dead, the living stept, Btill charging on the guns which swept
The slippery streets of Monterey.

The foe himself recoiled aghast, When, striking where he strongest lay, We swooped his flanking batteries past, And braving full their murderous blest, Storming home the towers of Monterey.

And there our evening bugies play;
Where orange boughs above their grave
Keep green the memory of the brave
Who fought and fell at Monterey.

We are not many, we who pass'd Beside the brave who fell that d ide the brave who fell that day, He'd rather share their warrior rest. Than not have been at Monterey. Longfellow's Shower Song,

How beautiful is the rain! After the dust and heat, In the broad and fiery street, In the narrow lane, How beautiful is the rain!

How it clatters along the roofs, Like the tramp of hoofs! How it gushes and gurgles out From the throat of an overflowing water-spout! Across the window pane It pours and pours,

With a muddy tide, Like a river down the gutters roars-The rain, the welcome rain! A Kind Word. Bvery-day life would glide along much more plea-verses, by J. T. Fields, were more universally adopted: A little word in kindness spoken, A motion or a tear, Has often healed the heart that's broken, And made a friend sincere.

Full many a budding flower, Which had a smile but owed its birth, Would bless life's darkest hour.

Then deem it not an idle thing. A pleasant word to speak;
The face you wear, the thoughts you bring, A heart may heal or break. A German Story.

A countryman one day, returning from the city, took home with him five of the finest peaches one could possibly desire to see, and as his children had never beheld the fruit before, they rejoiced over them exceedingly, calling them the fine apples with rosy cheeks, and soft plum-like skins. The father divided them amongst his four children, and retained one for their mother. In the evening, ere the children retired to their chamber, the father questioned them by asking-

"How did you like the soft rosy apples?" "Very much indeed, dear father," said the eldest boy: "it is a beautiful fruit-so acid, and yet so nice and soft to the taste; I have carefully preserved the stone, that I may cultivate a tree."

"Right and bravely done," said the father : "that speaks well for regarding the future with care, and is becoming in a young husbandman." "I have eaten mine and thrown the stone away," said the youngest; "besides which, mother gave me half of hers. Oh it tasted so sweet, and so melting in my mouth." "Indeed," answered the father: "thou hast not been prudent. However, it was very natural and child like, and displays wisdom enough for your years." "I have picked up the stone," said the second one, "which my little brother threw away, cracked it, eaten the kernel-it was as sweet as a nut in the taste-but my peach I have sold for so much money, that when I go to the city I can buy twelve of them." The parent shook his head reprovingly, say-

"Beware, my boy, of avarice. Prudence is all very well, but such conduct as yours is unchildlike and unnatural. Heaven guard thee my child from the fate of a miser. And you Edmund?" asked the father turning to his third son, who frankly and openly replied-

"I have given my peach to the son of our neighbor-the sick George, who has had the fever. He would not take it, so I left it on his bed, and I have just come away." "Now," said the father, "who has done the best with his peach?"

"Brother Edmund!" the three exclaimed aloud; "Brother Edmund!" Edmund was still and silent, and the mother kissed him with tears of joy in her eyes.

HEAVY PUNISHMENT.—An editor became martial and was created captain. On parade instead of 'Two paces in front-advance,' he unconsciously exclaimed 'Cash-two dollars a year in advance.' He was court-martialed and sentenced to read his own paper.

Our confidence in the excellence of these medicines; added to our desire to avoid the just prejudice of the medical profession against secret and quack nostrums, induced us to adopt this cantild course.—We append a few of the notices we have received from Physicians:

Physicians:

From Dr. Wm. H. Farrow, Snowhill, Mtl.

GENTLEMEN—I have frequently in my practice prescribed your "Stabler's Anodyne Cherry Expectorant" and "Diarrhea Cordial," with great satisfaction to myself, and to the entire relief of such diseases as they profess to cure. I consider them happy combinations of some of our most valuable and safe therapeutical agents, and must be of infinite worth to the afflicted and mankind at large. In furnishing the medical profession with these active and concentrated preparations, so convenient for administration, and of a standard quality, you have rendered them an eminent service, and I can do no less than earnestly recommend these preparations to practitioners, and especially in the country, where the impurity of commercial Drugs is one of the greatest obstacles to the success of the Physician.

Drugs is one of the greatest obstacles to the success of the Physician.

Dr. W. S. Love, writes to us that he has administered the Expectorant to his wife; who has had the Bronchitis for fourteen years, and that she is fast recovering from her long standing malady. It has in a few weeks done her more good than all the remedies she has herectofore used under able medical counsel.

From Dr. H. P. Worthington, Laurel, Md.

"After several months use of your Expectorant, both in my own family, and in general practice, I am confirmed in the opinion expressed of it, when first made acquainted with the recipe. For one I thank you for so convenient and elegant a preparation of the Wild Cherry."

From Samuel Martindale, M. D., Chesapeake City, Md.

"I have much pleasure in adding my testimony in favor of your valuable Cherry Expectorant. I have, after an extensive use, found it to answer all my expectations."

From Dr. Dani. W. Jones, Somerset Co., Md. "I have given your Expectorant and Diarrhea Cor-dial a fair trial, and am delighted with their effects. never having had them to fail in a single instance. I shall take pleasure in recommending them.

The above notices of recommendation from mem-bers of the Medical Faculty, Pharmaceutists of high standing, and Merchants of the first respectability, should be sufficient to satisfy all, that these medicines are worthy of trial by the afflicted, and that they are of a different stamp and class from the "Quackery" and "Cure-All" so much imposed upon the public.

A Plain and Unvarnished Statement.

We commend the perusal of the extract below to our readers. Mr. Bull is a merchantof high character:

SANDY BOTTOM, Middlesex County, Va.,

August 29th, 1853.

Messrs. Mortimer & Mowbray—Gents: You may think it strange that I have taken the liberty to write you this letter, but I do so under circumstances that justify it. As you are the Agents for Hampton's Yearnable Tincture, I deem it expedient to address you this note, hoping. It may be a part of the honorable means of giving this medicine that notoriety which its merits deserve.

Being it the habit of vending medicines which relate to the patent, and regular system, I consider myself to some extent, a judge of the real merits of many of them. My experience teaches me that "Hampton's Tincture" is a medicine of real merit and intrinsic value. When I say this, I do not say that it is an infallible cure, in all cases, but I mean to say that "Hampton's Tincture" will favorably operate in all diseases originating from a want of proper secretiens of the gastric juices, bad digestion, and consequently bad deposit of animal matter from that source. I believe that many diseases located in various parts of the system, such as inflammation, Ulcers, Scrofula, etc., originally have their being in the stomach, from badfood, bad digestion, and consequently bad depositions of the circulation to those parts; and I will believe Hampton's Vegetable Tincture will even react these causes.
