 The many thousands cured at this Institution; and the very extensive practice of Dr. Johnston (ex' odding all others) is a sufficient guarantee that he to the only proper Physician to be consulted.
 Dr. Johnston,
 Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London Graduate from one of the most eminent Colleges of the United States, and the greater part of whose life has been spent in the Hospitals of London, Paris, Philadel-phia and elsewhere, has effected some of the most as to bishing cures that were ever known. ### Where the willow trees whisper Their plaint to the gale, And the vesper-bells pealing Resound thro' the vale;

I will linger at twilight, When labors are o'er, And in sadness remember The bright days of yore,-Of yore-of yore-

The bright day of yore. II For beside yonder lakelet, That dreams in repose; Where the wild flowers blossom And vie with the rose; Is the tomb of a loved one With ivy grown o'er, Whose sweet image I'll never No, never, see more-

No more-no more-No, never, see more.

III There in silence reposing May soft be her rest, While the damp of the valley Is on her cold breast;

Tho' she's gone from my vision, I'll ever think o'er Those fond molients of rapture.

That thrill me uo more-No more-no more-That thrill me no more.

Over fields of thymy blossom, Over beds of dewy flowers, Now upon the streamlet's bosom Now within the whispering bowers; Soft and slow_ The moonbeams go; Wandering on through midnight hours:

Lightly b'er the crested billows, Where the heaving waters flow, Where the bird finds her pillow,

There the glittering moonbeams go-Soft and slow,

Soft and slow. Ever wandering, soft and slow.

[From the Albany Register, October 3.] We have small confidence in these 'old Ohio pilots'-they tell such awfully large stocertain city. When the first Sunday morn-ing came after he had entered his new situ-ation, he thought of the old clistom at home ries. They have no conscience in their ex-agerations. We have been among them 'long ago:' We started from Olean Point, in the county of Caltafaugus—a great place in those days, on the Alleghany river. We went down to its confluence with the Ohio on a lumber raft, and then we got on board of a of reading a portion of scripture as a pre-paration for the day, he hesitated to take his bible from his truthk because of the presence of the other clerks. Still he could not pirogue, of some four or five tons burden, and be easy. He went towards his trunk and went aliead: Cincinnati was comparatively a then returned to his seat, till his uneasiness small place then. It was not a great and was noticed by one of his companions, who said—What's the matter! You are as rest-less as a weathercock." He hesitated in anbeautiful city, with long, wide streets, cutting each other at right angles, reaching away in a long vista of shade trees, and lined with a long vista of shade trees, and lined with magnificent business structures and elegant dwellings: Along the majestic Ohio were great old forests of gigantic growth, where now are broad farms teething with agricultu-ral wealth: There were constructed to the truth of the structure of the struct but hild not taken it out for fear of each other lagoons and marshes; swamps covered with -a fear of ridicule, the one from the other .--The three Bibles were now taken out, and a portion was continued, its influence was felt, lowland trees, and it is a simple truth that. when, the sun was running low, and the and when the story got out and their habit was known, they went by the name of THE BIshadows of evening were gathering around, the musquitoes were out in their might, and they were an extraordinary breed: We had BLE CLERKS! an 'old pilot,' who was an original in his way, and the stories he told of the early setinfluence of the Bible prevent the development of any of the true mercantile qualities? They tlement, and of the incidents occurring in his experience in the 'olden time,' were astonishing. We remember a bear story of his telling. He seemed to believe it himself, for he told it with a gravity. of face that would ill comport with its falsity. We do not vouch for it verity, we simply tell it as the 'old pilot' told it to us one pleasant afternoon, as we were gliding along quietly down the Obio, fighting musquitoes and watching the sun as he was sinking down into the western wilderness.

'Twenty years ago,' said the 'old pilot,' as he lighted his stump of a pipe and seated himself on a whisky keg, 'there warn't a great many people along the banks of the Ohio; except Ingins and bears, and we did'nt like to cultivate a very close friendship with either of them; for the Ingins were cheatin', deceivin', scalping' critters, and the bears sometimes had an dipleasant way with em proud to accept the favor-spending the Sab-bath here and there, he was known as no that one didnt like: I came out for some people over on the east side of the mountains, vicious; and to nothing but his waste of the lookin' for land, with a company of four men Sabbath could be traced the habits of expen-

who had hunted over the country: dittire, and dissipation that ruined the man .-'We came down the Alleghany in two canoes, and shanteed on the Ohio, just below where the Alleghany enters it. We hid our canoes and struck across the country, and traveled about exploring for four weeks. We saw a mighty deal of good land that trip, and when we got back to our shantying ground we were tuckered out, as you may well believe. We rested here a couple of days, laying around loose, and taking our comfort after a fashion of our own. Early one morning; while my comrades were asleep I rose and went across the river after a deer. for we wanted venison for breakfast. I got a buck, and was returning, when what should I see but a bear swimming the Ohio, and I put aftër liim in chase; I soon overhauled the critter; and picked up my fille to give him a settler; when I found that in paddling I had spattered water into the canoe, wetting the primin' and making the thing of no more use than a stick. I did'nt understand much about the liater of the beast then, and though I'd run him down and drown him, or knock him on the head: So I put the cande right head on towards him, but when the bow touched him, what did he do but reach his great paws up over the side of the boat and begin to climb in. I had'nt bargained for that, and felt mighty onpleasant, you may swear, at the prospect of having such a passenger. 'I hadn't time to get at him with my rifl until he came tumblin' into the bow of the dug-out, and as he seated himself on his stern, showed as fine a set of ivory as a body would wish to see. There we set, he in one end of dug-out and I in the other, eyeing one another in a mightily suspicious sort of way. He didn't seem inclined to come to my end of the canoe, and I was principled agin goin' towards his. I made ready to take to the water on short notice, but at the same time con cluded to paddle him ashore if he'd let me do it quietly. Well, I paddled away, the bear every now and then grinning at me, skinning his face till every tooth in his head stood right out, and grumblin' to himself in a way that seemed to say : 'I wonder if that chap is good to eat.' I did nt say a word to him. treating him all the time like a gentleman, but kept pullin' for the shore: When the canoe touched the ground he clambered over the side and climbed up the bank, and, giving me an extra grin, started off into the woods. I pushed the dug-out back suddenly, and gave him, as he left, an extra war-whoop, which seemed to astonish him, for he quickened his pace mightly, as if quite as glad as I was to part company. I've never tried to drown a bear since, and shan't undertake to do it again in a hurry.'

The Panorama of Life.

The Panorama of Life. We love to sit for hours and watch the moving panorama of humanity as it moves along the street. It is like reclining upon the shore and watching the tide of life as it flows on, and marking the characters of the fish in the stream. A scaly set, as a general thing. The great ones live by eating the little ones; all knowing as owls, and yet all biting, at the parted hook l NO. 26. A young man, says the Philadelphia Mer-chant, joined two others as a clerk in the same establishment, and as room mate, in a naked hook!

naked hook! Mostly minnows, however, that awim by, riling the water terribly, but themselves of lit-tle consequence in the great ocean of human life. Here is a chance for a study, as we look into the street. It is not a bad place to read character. The tide of busy feet is ever flowing. Almost every conceivable specimen of humanity is here seen. Human nature is here written out in every phase upon the fig-ures that move before the eye as the living diorama unwinds around the corner. Every extreme is mingled and blended, and we peer under bonnets and hat-brims for new speci-mens of the human face divine. You may mens of the human face divine. You may judge men here at a glance. The physiog-nomy reveals much—the toss of the head, the manner of walking, or the poise of the hat: Now we can take a cursory glance at the book of human nature, as its thickly written leaves turn over one by one.

Some are fair to look upon, and are cleanly written over with a bright record, in a neat hand ; while some are most miserably blotted And what were their characters! Did the and blurred, some thumbed and soiled, and some almost entirely blank. And then the quality of the paper, and the letter-press. Some coarse, made from poor material, and poorly finished. Others, of the were young men of integrity, of method, order, precision, and dignity. By familiarity with the Bible they were in constant inter-course with the best models of character, and heavy and solid, and capable of receiving and retaining inde lible impressions. Some are gilt-edged and nearly glossed, like the exte-rior of some people; while within a damning record is written upon every page! Here's they proved that the Scriptures not only kindle lights of guidance when philosophy and reason fail, but they hold up and stimulate to the imitation of the highest order of manliyour tissue-paper, or silk with a satin border, the dandy page of both sexes, nice to the touch, rustling like a gossamer, but of no use save to set off the more solid and useful.— A manufacturer and merchant related to us one day the history of two young men who, in his establishment, became "free" at the same time, the one a "Bible clerk," and the other Here's a page of blotting-paper, a true em-blem of your tattling, gossiping, meddling-body, who sucks out and retains the spots not so. ### Bards of the Bible.

Many sparkling passages occur in "Gilfil lan's Bards of the Bible," republished in a neat form by the Harpers of New York city. The following are illustrations:

"The Bible is a mass of beautiful figures; its words and its thoughts are alike poetical; it has gathered around its central truths all natural beauty and interest. It is a temple with one altar and one God, but illuminated by a thousand varied lights, and studded with a thousand ornaments. It has, substantially, but one declaration to make, but it utters it in the voice of creation. Shining forth from the excellent glory, its light has been reflected on a myriad of intervening objects, until it has become attempered to our earthly vision. It now breathes upon us at once from the heart of man, and from the countenance of nature. It has arrayed itself in the charms of fiction. It has gathered new beauty from the works of creation, and new warmilh and new power from the very passions of clay. It has pressed into its service the animals of the forest, the flowers of the field, the stars of heaven-all the elements of nature. The lion spurning the sands of the desert, the wild roe leaping over the mountains, the lamb led in silence to the slaughter; the goat speeding to the wilderness, the rose blossoming in Sharon, the lilly drooping in the valley, the apple tree bowing under its fruit, the great rock shadowing a weary land; the river gladdening a dry place, the moon and the morning star, Carthel by the sea, and Tabor in the mountains, the dew from the womb of the morning, the rain upon the mown grass. the rainbow encompassing a dark place, the light of God's shadow, the thunder His voice, the wind and earthquake His footsteps. All such varied objects are made as if naturally designed from their creation to represent Him to whom the book and all its emblettis point. Thus the spirit of the book has ransacked creation to lay its treasures on Jeliovah's altar, united the rays of a far streaming glory on the little hill of Calvary, and weven a garland for the bleeding brow of Emanhel, the flowers of which have been culled from the garden of the universe. "The power of the Bible over man has been long and obstinately resisted ; but resisted in vain. For ages has this artless, loosely piled little book been exposed to the fire of the keenest investigation, a fire meanwhile which has consumed contemptuous the mythology of the Illiad, the husbandry of the Georgies, the historical truth of Livy, the fables of Shaster, the Talmud, and the Koran, the artistic inerit of many a popular poem, the authority of many a work of Philosophy and science. And yet there the Bible lies unburt, untouched, with smell of fire having passed upon it. Many an her from the shoulders to the ground; the not one of its pages singed, with not even the attempt has been made to scare away this Fie ry Pillow of our wanderings, to prove it a mere natural product of the wilderness ; but still light after light rises, like one of the sure and vershining stars in the vangoard of the great march of man, the old column guiding slow, but guiding certainly to in the Lands of protitise, both in the life that is, and that which is to comoth biresfest While other books sie fil mets; shining with reflected radiance, this Book, I ke the su shines with ancient and unborrowed rays: "Other books, after shining their fille season, may perish in flames ficreet than these which destroyed the Alexandriait library; this must in essence r main fine as gold, but inconsumable as Asbestos in the general couffs-

Chinese Bride.

A modern traveller describes the dress and appearance of a Chinese bride, as follows ; "The son of our host having been married a few days, we were honored, according to the usage of the country, during the honeymoon, with permission to lock at his wife, as she stood at the door of the apartment, while we were passing out. The lady was surround-ed by several old women, who held tapers and lamps above and abbtit her, that we might have a more complete view of her figure and attire. She was a young persoit, apparently about seventeen years of age, of middling stature, with very sgreeable features and light complexion, though she seemed to have used paint. She wore a scarlet robe, superbly trimed with gold, which completely covered sleeves were very full, and along the bottom was a beautiful fringe of small balls. He head-dress sporkled with jewels, and was eter gantly beaded with rows of pearls, enviroling it like a caronet ; from the front of which a brilliant angular ornament hung over her forehead and between her evelorows. She stood in a modest and graceful attitude, having het eves fix d on the floor. Hough she occasionally raised them, with a gamee of timid curiosiv, towards her face, and then lowered them very slowly. If r attendants, prestiming that the guests would be gratified with a view of what the Chinese consider as the consummation of female beauty, raised the hem of the wrathtul. mautle from her feet for a moment or two; they were of the most diminutive kind, and reduced to a mere point at the toe, The shoes, like the rest of her bridal apparel, were scar-let, embroidered with gold. Her demeanor during this exhibition was natural and becoming, and once or twice; a smile for an instant showed that she was not unconscious of the ad-miration which her appearance excited."

"Now," said the employer; "the one lives in his own house, virtuous and happy; ille other needs charity to keep him along.

Peculiarities of Englishinen.

The Bible Clerk.

Lately three young women hanged themselves -being crossed in love. I expressed surprise at this; but the English were only astonished to hear that the lovers of the unhappy trio were Irishmen, who are very much despised n England. The Englishman destroys himself as quietly as he sees life destroyed in oth-ers. Lately a gentleman hanged himself to vex his wife, by having his property thereby confiscated. 'He was tired of life,' said an English father not long since, when he was told that his son had drowned himself in the Thaines:

With these peculiarities, the Englishman has sound and good qualities. You will hear him use the word 'simple' with pleasure, and he loves those he calls 'good-natured' people who are, according to him, peculiar to hi country. I think it would be difficult to justify even his 'How d'ye do.' The English man never talks without having something sensible to say so that often in society long intervals of silence occur. It is the habit of the Englishman to break these silences by frequent 'How d'ye do's,' which people address another from time to time. These frequent How d'ye do's,' signifies that the host is thinking about his guest, although he has nothing, at the moment, to say to him. The Englishman's books are like his conversation. full of sound sense, and generally free from quotations. He reads his laws-not in the spirit which dictated them-but to the letter. An instance of this habit occurred not long go. The law of England forbids marriage with two wives. On this point it was a common saying that a man had only to take three wives to be beyond the reach of the statue .-And this view was common enough, till a fel ow traveled through the country, marrying all the pretty girls he met by the way; where upon the jurisconsults met, and declared that it was impossible to marry a third wife without having been guilty of marrying two, and that therefore the statute was sound. The Englishman's laws are generally mild enough, but wayward and wrongly severe, so that some of the greatest rascals are punish ed only with the pillory, while debtors suffer the most horrible tortures-being cast into prison, and left often to die of hunger. No man, however, is condemned to death without having been found guilty, first by twelve judges, or grand jurymen, and in the second place; by twelve judges, (the common jury) of his own condition. All these judges must be of one mind. A singular instance of this system occurred lately. A man was tried for murder; and the proofs of his guilt was se convincing that eleven of his judges found him guilty without hesitation. One judge, however persisted in his opinion that the prisoner was innocent: The president tried to reason with the dissentient man, But he was offexible. At length; the eleven judges, beng unable to support the pangs of hunger any longer, acquited the prisioner. The president, astonished at the obstinary of the judg , asked him in private his reasons for believing the prisoner to be innotent: The judge, urymail; having bound the president, by oath not to reveal the secret; declared that he him self was the nuifderer; and that he would not add to his er mes, by hanging an inncoent man .- Household words.

blister the tongue of life. And we have neve

ing noses and shrinking fingers. Anecdote of Gen. Jackson:

The following anecdote is related upon the authority of Thomas G. Holmes, of Baldwin county, who was in the Pensacola expedition :

On the 2d Nov. 1814, an army of 3000 men, crossed the Tombigbee at the Cutoff and marched through Nannahubba Island towards Mim's Ferry. Its destination was Pensacola, which Gen. Jackson a few days after reduced by his victorious arms: About half way between the two rivers many wagons sunk down in the mud: The General being considerably in advance of his military family rode up, enveloped in an old drab overcoat, wearing a broad-brimed hat which had seen thuch service, with his cheeks encased in red flannel -for he was suffering from salivation contracted in attack of billious fever while in Mobile; The wagoners did not recognize him but when he dismounted placed his shoulder to the wheel and called upon them to assist; they perceiv-ed that a man of authority was in their midst. It was a new army just raised in Tennessee, and many of them had never seen Gen. Jackson, who had now for more than a year been in the enemy's country contending with the Creck Indians. While they were all busily at work, a dashing officer, elegantly dressed in regimentals on a fine roan mare, rode up, and in a pom-pous manner dammed the whole party, and T threatened them with punishment for their tardiness in extricating the wagons. The old hero, raising his head, requested the officer, in a mild manner to alight and assist the party. The latter highly offended, said, "I will have you to know, sir, that I am Major Rose; Assistant Deputy Quarter Master General to General Coffee's Brigade." Bor, and J. Wetching.

The General, throwing himself into one of his commanding attitudes, replied. "Well sir, I will have you to know that I am Gen. Andrew Jackson, Commander-in-Chief of the 7th District, with my shoulder to the wheel; get down, sir, and do your duty?' After this startling intelligence, so eager was Major. Rose to help the wagoners that he did not take time properly to dismount, but absolute-ly fell from his horse. - Mobile Register.

Cheerfuiness.

Cheerfulness and a fistival spirit fills the soul full of harmony-it makes and publishes glorifications of God--it produces thankingness and serves the end of charity; and when the oil of gladness runs over, it makes bright and tail emissions of light and holy fires, reach-ing up to a cloud, and making joy round about; and, therefore, since it is so innocent, and may be so pious and full of holy advantage, whatever can innocently minister to his holy joy does set forward the we k of feligion and charity.cal top of all religion, is nothing else but a union of joys concentrated in the heart, and reflected from all the angels of our life and intercourse: dd to his er mes; by hanging an inncoent nan. - Household words. The trial of William Arrison, charged with causing the death of Isaac Allison and his wife, by sending them a torpedo box, was concluded at Cinciunati on the 20th inst. It had occupied the court nine days, and a great deal of testimony was elicited The Gazette of the 21st, speaking of the verdict, The jury having retired to their room for consul-tation, agreed on their-verdict, we learn, in less than an hour. The court having adjourned until six o'clock, they could not make known their impor-TT tant budget. A large audiance, on the doors being opened, filled the amphitheatre of seats, and a number ladies repaired to those they had occupied during the trial. The Sheriff's officers soon brou ught in the prisoner, who, after receiving the cordial handshaking by part of his counsel, Judge Key and Mr. Dickson, was placed on the prisoner's seat to the left of the court, when the clerk demanded of the jury their verdict, which proved to be, "Guilty of murder in the first degree, as charged in the endict-ment." Judge Key desired that the jury should be polled, each of whom rose and acknowledged severally the verdict read to be his verdict. During this whole scene, while the ladies and the stern judge were moved to tears, the prisoner betraved not the least emotion. When the clerk read aloud the verdict of "Guilty," some one in the audience cried out, "that's right." The sheriff's officer immediately called to order.

1854 and 1855. While we are writing this atticle the year 1854 is dying. A few militites and it will be no more. How few are lamenting its departure. The wind even is hot howling a requium, or sighing a prayer over its dying couch. All is calm and still. There is no bell tolling, no knell resounding, no sound awakenening a cord of sympathy, or enlisting a foring of regret, but calmly, peacefully, the old year is departing, and it will soon have joined its aged and weary friends which have preceeded it. The birth of the new is swallowing up the death of the old.

Myriads of hearts welcome the advent of '55 and the same hearts, if beating, will forget '55 when old age creeps over it, and in forgetting it, will extend the same greeting to '56. 1854 was young once We remember well when its youth was here, and when it was loved with a fervor fully equaling that which clusters around the present year. But it has gone, and like the many friends we cherished, is now numbered among the things that were; but are not. A great harvest has been sown during its sojourn, and the grain will be gathered hereafter.

Had the year that is past and gone, left us a copy of the diary it kept while on its pilgrimage, what a vast field we would have to wander in. What vain regrets we would be compelled to indulge in. To sec at one glance all our follies, our madness. What thoughts it would awaken. How the ghosts of the bleeding hours of misspent time, which are marked upon every page, would rise up to remind us of our past wastefulness, and admonish us to be more careful of the present, and not scatter and waste that, which once gone, returns no more forever. Then too look at the hopes that have been wrecked, the aspir ations that were crushed,-the prospects that faded away and left-where once all was glowing and brilliant, lurid clouds, darkness impenetrable .--There too, were the rainbows of promise, arching at the time the fondest anticipations of life; color after color died away, until not even a single ray of light was left to make the darkness around visible: And here is a tiny cup of joy. We remember the very time we drank it. Our hearts, small as the cub appears now, overflowed with delight, and we called this, a glorious world, full of joy, full of sunshine But, Ahl here is a cup of woe. A bitter, bitter cup and we were compelled to drink it, even the dregs. Then we complained of our lot, and we sorrowed that life was so full of grief, so void of happiness. But let us cease looking at the past, let us talk of the present, let us think of the future. Now, this | work shops-I have placed the mechanics of the little moment, fleeting, flying, is all that we can call Armory, under the Government of a mechanic of

Civil Superintendant at Harpers-Ferry We are authorized to announce, the appointment of Henry W. Clowe as Civil Superintendent at Harpers-Ferry

We have been permitted to take the following ex-tract from a private letter of Mr. Faulkner, our representative from this District in relation to this snbject, dated Washington, Dec. 21st, 1854 :

"In presenting the name of Mr. Clowe, now a mechanic at Harpers Ferry Armory, to the President for the office of Civil Superintendent, I did so, not only under a firm conviction of his ample qualifications for the position, but because, I looked upon the selection of such a person, as a striking and beantiful illustration of that great Democratic and Republican principle, which I made the basis of my action in the reform of the Government of the Armoriës. Mr. Clowe is an honest, skillful; hardworking and intelligent mechanic; He has been connected with the National Armöry at that place for the last eighteen or twenty years, retaining throughout that time the confidence of his employers, and the Fespect of his subordinates and preserving amidst the difficulties of his position there, the purity and independence of his character as a man. He is familiar with all the duties and responsibilities of the station. His past life gives the assurance that he has sympathies in common with those who constitute the operative corps of the Armory; whilst he is known to possess that firmness, integrily; decision and administrative ability, that will protect the interests of the Government and advance still higher the claims of the Civil System upon the confidence of the country. Such a selection must exercise a beneficial, moral influence upon the dicipline and character of the Armory, for every artizan may see in that example, that his position does not exclude him from the highest and most honorable posts of the establishment, but that the line of promotion is open to him according to his merit:

It is akin to the same reform which as Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs I contributed last summer to introduce into the army, by which promotion to its highest posts are now for the first time in our bistory as a principle of general policy. open to the rank and file, and which reform, has already as we learn from the Report of the Secretary of War and the Presidents Message, exercised so striking an influence over the character of the Recruiting service of the country.

And lastly in the selection of Mr. Clowe we have not had to resort to an importation from the North; but have found a man eminently qualified amongst ourselves ; a mechanic of our own raising-a native of Virginia-and a native and resident of our own District.

In taking leave of the subject, which I now do, I may say to my friends at Harpers-Ferry, who amidst all the discourgements of my situation, have exhibited such unfaltering reliance in me, and for which they have my sincere thanks; that having atcomplished all, and I may say more; than I ever -ventured to promise them, the wisdom of my policy will now in a great measure depend upon their own future good conduct. It is true I have vindicated a great principle of Republican Government-I have overthrown the Military supremacy at our National our own. Time precious, above all things, it is that Armory; but unless they are thorotighly im-

From the London Times, Nov Finaticial Effects of the war in England. We are informed, on unquestionable author bat the belief we expressed yesterday as to il of the exchequer and the necessity of a loan, and the opinion we also arowed as to the scale of our earlier preparations having been unfortunately stinted by an undue anxiety to keep expenditure within the limits of income, are both unfounded. We can only say that if anything, we have rather understated the expenses of the war, as it is now to be carried on.— Indeed we hope and trust we are not to be told that the war at this moment is to be paid for out of our income, not only because we do not believe it, but because we should think it a most misplaced and disastrous ambition to attempt it. It is utterly inconceivable that we can hope to keep up an effecand disastrous ambition to attempt it. If is utterly inconceivable that we can hope to keep up an effec-tive force of even thirty thousand men in the Orimea as it ought to be kept up, with every possible appli-cation for its health and strength, till Sebastopool is safe in the hands of the allies, without greatly exceed-ing the estimates of last session and the expected reve-ues of the view.

ue of the year. Government has laid its hands on every available steamer, and there is not a line of packet service which is not deranged in consequence. We are un-dertaking the conveyance not only of our own rein-forcements, but also those of the French. The coalng, and occasionally replacing these transports, is an immense addition to the hire. Then we are buyan immense addition to the nire. Then we are buy-ing and building at greater rate than ever. If we are not substituting new fire arms for the whole of like army, we ought to be. The forces in the Grimea are represented as fairly out at elbows, ragged, shirt-ëss, ill shod, and altogether approximating to the condition of Omer Pasha's brave but ill-used soldie-Fy. Government is doing its best to mend matters in these respects, and a ship full of wollens had just arrived at the date of our last advices. It is also sending out wooden houses for 25,000 men, stoves, charcoal, wood, and even coal from Heracles. Only yesterday we were told that the leather mar-ket was in a state of great excitement, and the Hud-son'sBay Company thrown into transports by some government purchases, comprising an order for 18,-000 buffalo hides, fortunately in store. We presume that next year we shall not be content with merely holding our annual naval review in the Baltic, instead of Spithead, but shall attempt some achieve ment worth the soul of our navy. For thatpulrpose it is evident that we must have an entirely new description of vessels, that can enter shallows and defy granite batteries. This cannot be done without vast expense: Then we should like to know the expense of the new company to every regiment in the line, the augmentation of the artillery, and the bring-ing a hundred regiments of militia into form and condition for regular service. Out few fortifications at home are receiving extensive additions. But here ve must stop. As to the opinion, which we happen to share with the whole of the public, that the conduct of the war up to the end of September or there-abouts, was stinted by the idea of keeping the expenditure within income, it is the only conceivable excuse for the fact of so little having been done for the whole of the two months after the expedition to the Crimea had been finally determined on: Now, would the British army have been in this condition, would the line of defences have been forcd on the 5th, should all our operations have compelled, as was the case at the last date, altogether to suspend the operations of the siege, if reinforcements had been sent out in August and September, fast enough to keep up the army to a sufficient standard? The drain of this war has been very great, but not greater than what the experience of all former wars and our knowledge of the climate and the enemy we had to deal with might have led us to expect. A are a deal his now been done, but it has been done at least two months too late. Why, unless it were from some idea that the country had got to the bot-tom of its purse, and could afford no more! It is, towever some satisfaction to find this idea indignanty repudiated. The War Minister has only to do what he considers necessary to the safety and efficien-cy of our forces, and he has a courte blanche as to the expenses. The public-even the prayers of in-come tax-will hear it with satisfaction; for we are dealt out to us, instant by instant, breath by breath pressed with the necessity of subordination, good would not feel the defeat of the British army

The most impressive evidence of the value of time is the fact that it is given to us in such small portions. We have but a moment at a time. How careful we should be to spend that moment, so that in the great future, to which we are all hastening, it will not stand there as evidence of folly and sinbut as testimony that we valued life as a probation to fit us for a new sphere, better suited to the development of attributes, which the ungenial influences of this world tended more to smother than to cultivate. Our existence here is only transitory and if we would be participants in a glorious future, we must laden every moment with the incen e that arises from good deeds. The beginning of the whose emblazoned banner, the battle was fought and year is the proper time to lop off any vices that we may be afflicted with, and which tend so much to the debasing of our natures. Let us resolve during the coming year to cultivate to a still greater extent the fine feelings of our hearts and the ennobling impulses of our souls, and when 1856 is here, we will have fewer regrets than we have now.

Dramatic Association.

The Dramatic Association of this place gave an exhibition on Christmas evening and also on Saturday night last. They played the CHARCOAL BURNER, and we think they acted their parts most admirably. All the actors performed their parts well, but particularly the CHARCOAL BURNER. MR. VERDICT and Miss BARBARY JONES .-Ma. VERDICT, was played to the very letter itself and we doubt very much if any actor could improve on it. The Dramatics, the entire company are hard to beat, and nothing short of regular, professed and acknowledged actors can surpass them.

03-Our readers will learn from another column that there has been a Superintendent appointed for the Harpers-Ferry Armory. The appointent we understand gives very general satisfaction, and we sincerely hope that the fruits of so much labor and indefatigable exertion of the ardent friends of the system, will be duly appreciated by those who are effected by the change. The Armories have now got what they demanded and what was their right, and the question of Military Superintendency we think, is settled forever.

How Things Change.

During the campaign of 1852, the Whig Press throughout the country, were particularly interested in the protection of the civil rights of the Catholics. They charged, as a serious objection why FRANKLIN silver answer these purposes better than any other Prence should not be elevated to the position he now substance. They may be divided into the minutest occupies, that he had voted to retain the offensive of parcels, they are scarce of much value in little clause, in the Constitution of New Hampshire, which bulk, and durable, and not likely to become so. prohibited Roman Catholics from holding places abundant as to afford any anxiety on that score. It or office under the Commonwealth. They charged would be inconvenient to be ever weighing out parhim with bigotry; with being the slave of his base cels of silver and gold, so you buy articles of merprejudices ; they called him the champion of intolerchandize, and therefore, certain stamps are put on ance, the defender of an illiberal, anti-American senfixed quantities, the metals to indicate their value, timent. As a comparison they pointed to their leadand this is called coinage. Government does this in er, who was in the far west, listening to the "rich order to prevent men from putting the stamp on less Irish brogue," and the "sweet German accent," as than lawful quantities. Money then isonly a facititathe great embodiment of all civil and religious libertor of exchange, it might be any other substance. ty. But they did not stop here. They were not satwheat as well as gold, iron as well as silver. It is isfied with courting the foreign vote by nice complia commodity of trade but one in constant use. The ments and delicate flatteries. The Whig party must amount in circulation will be in proportion to the go one step further than the farthest. They must demand of uses to which to apply it. If there is hold out a bribe to the foreign vote, by offering to little wheat in the market, and men are buying for so alter the naturalization laws, as to allow those bread, men will give more work, more merchandize, foreigners, who had, or might perform meritorious more money for it, and wheat will be up; so if there deeds, to become citizens at the end of one year .is little money in the market, men will give more This was all fair, it was done above board, in open for it; a man in renting a farm, pays a high or low day light, but we did not think at the time that the "rent according to circumstances, why not let the old General meant exactly what he said, and a major_ same principle apply to money? Money is more or ity of the foreign vote, that vote which he was courtless valuable to different persons, at different times ing, which he even bid for, did not believe that he and under different circumstances. Why ask the was as sincere as he might have been. Now we do not same price for it at all times? Usury is denominawish it to be understood that we believe that Gen. ted the taking more than money is worth, no not Scorr should receive the entire credit for the course than money is worth, but more thah a fixed standard be pursued towards the foreign population during which money is always supposed to be worth.that contest, on the contrary, we think he was merely expression to the sentiments honesity chier tained by the Whig party. But that party has seen proper to change its views, and it how holds opinions just as honest ones, which are completely opposite to those which it entertained two years ago. And the Whig Press, which was loud in condemning FRANKLIN PIERCE for acts which he never was guilty of, are now either openly and avowedly advocating intolerant doctrine, or else secretly and covertly, sanctioning and thereby fostering a society, that has its vitality from the fact, that it is the instrument of religious persecution. What strange things will occur. Such a change!

Crimba as if it were a great domestic calamity .-order, temperance, industry and zeal in the public Anything rather than that-loans, taxes, burdens, service, the experiment may prove a failure, and the crippled trade, and all the ills consequent on war; bitter fruits of that failure will be visited upon out let not Russia have it to boast, that she has themselves as well as upon me. I have no fears for overcome two great nations attempting to succor a the future. I have studied too closely the character of the American Mechanic, to feel any appreliensions for the success of my policy. 13 The Journal of Commerce, of Wednesday last, says that " at the Tabernacle last evening, Cassius M. Clay discoursed upon what he called the Political Despotism of Slavery. His address was a rehash of all the worn-out objections brought by the Abolitionists against slavery, and was utterly barren of any new ideas upon the subject. He stig-matized South Carolina as an 'oligarcy' of the worst kind, and Kentucky (his native State) as a despotism equal to that of Russia and the Starber.' Drs. Spring, Cox, Dewey, and Nehemiah Adams, came in for a share of his special consideration, and were characterized as a set of ' time servand Jesuitical priests?"

Can any man, or set of men say what mohey will always be worth? Why money is worth what it will bring in market. If it is wrong to take more than this fixed sum, it is surely equally wrong to take less, no good can descend into the minutize of business. These usury laws are said to protect the indigent. Men of extensive means borrow more thati men of small means. The widow and the orphan lend money, not borrow. They should have the highest market price. The capitalists make handsome profits off it. It is generally alleged that it will stop the young from squandering. Why the Young Americas of both sexes con't borrow money, but they buy from the merchant, tailor, milliner et id omnes genis, who stick the interest on in the shape of " small profits and quick returns."-Many of these "fast" youths' papas refuse to pay and the merchant can't lose, he taxes the honest creditor. Is not that so? If money goes up in value above 6 per cent, honest money lenders will withdraw their money from the market, and dishonest men will charge more now than the withdrawn money would justify as insurance against being informed on. ### The Poor.

BY COBNELIA J. M. JORDAN. Have pity on them, for their days Are cheerless, cold and drear, And night, unwelcomed, comes to them With many a grief-born tear. The scanty meal, the slender fire-Tired nature's unattained desire; Alas! we know not half the care The poor, the very poor must bear.

Speak kindly to them-do not chide, E'en though by sin and shame Their paths are darkened thus, yet oh, In pity do not blame. Its searching eye, who may endure, His searching eye, who may cause , To whom the parest are not pure; Tis His alone to judge, not we, Poor heritors of misery.

Deal gently with them-dark despair Hath filled their hearts with pain; Perchance a word may wake the chords Of slumbering joy agaia. Oh, to their gall-cup add no more; Be kind be soothing to the poor, For whatso'er their sins may be, They still should claim our sympathy.

Give freely to them what thou hast; Give freely to them what thou hast;
In mercy don't delay—
While fortune smiles turn not thy face
From helpless want away.
Thy prompt assistance yet may save
Some brother from a hungered's grave:
"Riches have wings"—ah, wisely said— You, too, may beg your "daily bread,"

The Merchant. Tare and tret. Box and net Box and hogshead, dry and wet, Ready made, Of every grade, Wholesale, retail, will you trade? Goods for sale, Roll or bale, Ell or quarter, yard or nail; Every dye, Will you buy? Wone can sell as cheap as I.

Thus each day Wears away, And his hair is turning gray I O'er his books, He nightly looks,

Counts his gain and bolts his locks. Bye and bye He will die-

But the ledger book on high Shall unfold How he sold, How he got and used his gold !

.... 'Ma,' said a little girl the other day who had scarcely entered her teens, 'ma, maint I get married !' "Why child !' said the anxious mother,

what on earth put that notion into your bead ?'

'Cause all the other girls are getting married as fast as they can, and I want to,

"Well you must not think of such a thing -don't vou never ask me such a foolish question again. Married indeed! Why I never heard the like .'

"Well, ma, if I can't have a husband maint I have a piece of bread and butter ?"

.... Every one has admired Parthenia's definition of Love to Ingomar "What Love is, if thou woulds't be taught Thy heart must teach alone; Two souls with but a single thought Two hearts that beat as one."

We append a few of the notices we have received from Physicians: From Dr: Wm. H. Farrow, Snowhill, Md. GENTLEMEN-I have frequently in my practice pre-scribed your "Stabler's Anodyne Cherry Expecto-rant" and "Diarhoea Cordial," with great satisfac-tion to myself, and to the entire relief of such diseases as they profess to cure. I consider them happy com binations of some of our most valuable and sale thera-peutical agents, and must be of infinite worth to the afflicted and mankind at large. In furnishing the medical profession with these active and concentrated preparations, so convenient for administration, and of a standard quality, you have rendered them an emi-nent service, and I can do no less than examestly recom-mend these preparations to practitioners, and especial-ly in the country, where the impurity of commercial Drugs is one of the greatest obstacles to the success of the Physician. 5. BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE, Tory. THE present critical state of European affairs will render these publications unusually interesting during the year 1854. They will occupy a middle ground between the hastily written news-items, crude speculations, and flying rumors of the daily Journal; and the ponderous Tome of the future historian, writ-ten after the living interest and excitement of the great political events of the time shall have passed away. It is to these Periodicals that readers must look for the only really intelligible and reliable his look for the only really intelligible and reliable his tory of current events, and as such, in addition to their well-established literary, scientific, and theolo-gical character, we urge them upon the consideration of the reading public. Arrangements are in progress for the receipt of early sheets from the British Publishers, by which we shall be able to place all our Reprints in the hands of subscribers, about as soon as they can be furnished with the foreign copies. Although this will involve a very large outlay on our part, we shall continue to furnish the Periodicals at the same low rates as here-tofore, viz: Per annum.
