VIRGINIA, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1865.

[Written for the Norfolk Virginian.]

BY AN ENGLISHMAN IN THE CONFEDERATE SERVICE. Gen. Longstreet and the Battle of the Wilderness, May 5, 1864.

SCRAPS FROM MY PORTFOLIO.

The Old First Corps of the Army of Northern Virginia had but little rest when there was any hard fighting to be done. After the second Maryland campaign, we had been sent out to the Army of Tennessee; our corps had maintained the high reputation of the "Virginia troops;" at the bloody battle of Chickamauga, the old Sharpsburg soubriquet was set aside, and Gen. Longstreet, no longer called the "War Horse," was generally known among the men as the "Old Bull of the Woods." Then came the skirmishes of "Le-Noir's" and "Campbell's" Stations, the siege of Knoxville, and the terrible winter of 1863-'4, in desolate East Tennessee. Our men had borne, unmurmuringly, hardships greater than any to which even they had before been accustomed; they had not com-plained, although with insufficient food, without blankets, with ragged clothing, and too often without shoes, they had tramped with bleeding feet for many a weary mile. On the march, and in bivouac, during the freezing day and comfortless night, in hunger and in thirst, they had been sustained by the remembrance of their dear Southern homewand dearer Southern land. All things, however, have an end, and in the spring of 1864 we joyfully returned to Virginia.

On the 3d of May, 1864, we left our camps, near Gordonsville, and on the night of the 5th our two divisions—Field's and Kershaw's -went into bivouac a few miles from the Wilderness. By daybreak in the morning the troops were again in motion, and marching towards the field of battle! The Federal troops had made a fierce attack upon the right of Gen. Lee's line, and had been repulsed. Again they came on and in in-creased force, until at last Heth's and Wilcox's divisions, in spite of their steady and determined fighting, were driven back in con-so far complete. It is well known that the section of country growth of bushes and briars being so matted and taugled that it is very difficult to force a or fifty yards the form of a man could scarcely be distinguished by any but a quick-sighted observer. The Federals were now resting were not to have it all their own way, and we, in turn, became the aggressors. Mahone's Brigade, with, I think, two others, was ordered to move around and attack Grant's left Gens. Lee and Longstreet, lying on the ground near the plank-road, quietly awaited the result. The rapid firing quickly told us that the "boys" were at them; and, before long, a mounted officer rode up to announce the successful completion of the movement. Grant's left had been routed and driven back on the centre, and the plan now was to make a vigorous assault while the iron was hot, and so finish the work before us. The whole of our corps was in readiness to move, and Gen. Longstreet and staff rode down the plankroad, where a portion of the corps was already formed in column. We had ridden but a short distance, when Lieutenant Colonel G. M. S-, Assistant Adjutant General of the First Army Corps, joined us. He had accompanied the flanking party, winning the hearts of Mahone's Brigade by an exhibition of chivalrous gallantry, akin to that which they have shown on many a bloody field; and he now brought us the most encouraging accounts of the position of affairs. General Jenkins, a noble son of South Carolina an admirable officer and courteous gentleman, was also with us, and his face was lit up with joy and confidence as he congratulated the "old Chief." It was now proposed to give three cheers for General Longstreet; and Jenkins, fearing lest his men should appear to be behind time, called out, "Why don't you cheer, men! Why don't you cheer!"— The air fairly rang with lusty shouts; again and again the men cheered, till voices were ciacked and tears of exhaustion ran down many a dusty cheek. Every heart was confident and gay—and so we moved forward.

Suddenly the snapping of a cap was heard in the woods on our right, and then the re-troops were for a moment thrown into sion, but they rallied immediately under theexhortations of their officers. I see it as plainly now as if it were but yesterday. Gen.

Longstreet, curbing his horse, which plunged with excitement, calm and inflexible as a statue of bronze, his head turned defiantly NEW ARRIVAL.

CHARLES JOHNSON.

November 21, 1865.

County and Jenkins waving his hand to his men, while in clear tones he cried: "Steady men! for God's sake steady!" Poor fellow! the words were scarcely uttered the new ords. words were scarcely uttered, the name of his God was still upon his lips, when a bullet pierced his head, and rising convulsively in his stirrups, he fell dead to the ground morsuddenly as it had begun. It was our own men who had done us this harm.

Jenkins, gallant fellow, was beyond all earthly assistance, and it remained for us but to grieve his loss. Longstreet was lying by a tree at the side of the road, the blood flowing with terrible rapidity from his neck.—Gen. Field, the senior Division commander, now assumed command, and kneeling by our beloved General received a few words of instruction. The General grew rapidly weak-er, but as consciousness gradually left him, he still could summon up energy enough to say in deep and earnest tones: "Press them on, General Field; press them on, Sir!"

A litter was obtained; and Gen. Longstreet was carried slowly to the rear; his hat concealed his features, and the men anxiously asked who was wounded? It was known too soon, and to honor their General, as they thought for the last time, the men gave a prolonged and enthusiastic cheer. The General heard them; he could not be deaf to their voices, and it was a touching sight as he slowly, faintly, raised his hat, showing, for a moment, that well known face, now so chastly and pale. One incident particularly struck me. When the General was hit, a private soldier took his horse; he had mounted him, and fully equipped with rifle, blanket and canteen, was now riding behind the litter. One of our couriers told him to dismount, and his reply was characteristic:
"No! Sir-ree! Look hyar, man! General
Longstreet gave me this hyar horse to mind, and all hell can't git him from me without his say-so." Nor shall I ever forget the sad expression of General Lee's face, when he, too, heard of our disaster; nor his gentle, sympathizing voice, as he said: "I hope,

General, that you are not seriously hurt."

At the time that Longstreet was disabled, a combined movement had been commenced which the Federals could not then have well withstood; but new plans and deliberations became necessary, and from ten minutes past twelve, the hour of the accident, nothing of importance was done-no advantage was gained.

In conclusion, I will briefly state the cause fusion. With a cheer, the Federal troops of the occurrence, the melancholy results of pushed forward; our exhausted men could which I have described, and which comdo no more; there seemed no hope of further pletely justifies those who were its innocent successful resistance; but there was a cloud authors. It was taken up along the line, and it was this concentrated and general usually called the "Wilderness" is covered with a dense growth of pines, the under- street. Ten men in the 12th Virginia were killed, and the loss would have been far greater but that the ensign of the regiment, way through it, while at a distance of forty with his customary stoical disregard of danger, ran with colors in hand ahead of his mand, and so caused the firing to cease. At the battle of Spottsylvania Court House comparatively quiet, taking perhaps, a long the gallant ensign of the Twelfth regiment breath before "trying it on" again; but they was mortally wounded. His career was too short; yet he died covered with glory. While he lived the colors of the regiment never trailed in the dust; and could he but have looked into the future it would have consoled his proud spirit to know that those colors which he had borne so faithfully and well were never, never surrendered!

HUMILIATING, TRULY.

It is enough to pain the heart of the South ern people, to reflect upon the humiliating attitude which she is made to assume in the councils of the nation. The Fredericksburg Herald, on this subject, very pertinently land! A United States Senator, in Washington, gave as his estimate that the amount of claims for damages to loyal citizens and claims of loyal States growing out of the war, would reach the sum of three hundred million dollars. Doubtless this is a somewhat exaggerated estimate, but the sum will probably reach two hundred millions dollars.

A Richmond letter writer says that

[From the Journal of Commerce.]
THE FINANCIAL FUTURE.

It is always difficult to forecast the future, and financial predictions are especially un-reliable. In this country, more than any other, has it been found impossible to esti-mate results yet to be attained by anything we know of the past; and thus the most far-sighted have found themselves utterly at fault in their judgment. Just now the finacial in their judgment. Just now the finacial problem takes precedence of the political, in the minds of most thoughtful persons; and there is far more anxiety in reference to it than is generally confessed. A great variety of theories have been proclaimed, and each has its special advocates, but we have seen no plan of action yet proposed which had any probability of success.

One flippantly urges a resumption of specie payments, as if that were simply a method of progression, and not the very result to-

of progression, and not the very result to-ward the attainment of which all means are to be directed. Another suggests a further issue of national currency, without pausing to consider that, as a remedy for existing difficulties, this would be the application of the homeopathic principle in allopathic doses. The most common proposition, however, vaguely refers to some form of contraction as the basis of future action. The changes are rung on this theme until the oft-repeated phrase becomes so current that many adopt it as the probable solution of the whole difficulty. Indeed, it is gravely announced from Washington, as if by authority, that the government has determined to exert all its force to reduce the volume of the currency, and thus advance by constant, if not rapid steps, toward the desired consummation.

All this only disturbs the public mind, and misleads those who put their faith in such assertions. The country ought never to have had the paper money inflation, and our readers need not be told that we have steadily opposed it from its first inception. But the best method of removing the evil is not so apparent. Those who think that it can be done without a systematic struggle which shall tax the endurance of the nation to the utmost, can have no proper appreciation of the magnitude of the burden, or the extent of its

It is easy to speak of contraction, but who is to inaugurate it? Not the mass of the their assiduors attention to each other, and be people, surely, for they must be the first to suffer, and few are willing to invite present pain in the hope of such an uncertain reward. We pointed at this years ago, when the inflation was undertaken, with the promise that the moment the unnatural stimulus had served its purpose, the people would re-turn to instant sobriety. We showed then what is proven now, that no inebriate ever voluntarily relinquished the cup while it was possible for him to carry it to his lips. No! The pressure must come altogether from the outside before the penance can begin. The return from this mad race is only to be made by a wearisome path, where every step will sweetest joy earth has for you. There is no be marked with pain. Whence can this other way for you to do. If you are happy pressure come? The answer is ready on many lips: the Secretary of the Treasury must lead the people back. But can he? In nearly all that is written on this subject, it is taken for granted that if the government only has the disposition, it has the ability to adopt this measureat once. But a little examination will show that if the head of the Treasury were reckless of consequences, he has not the power to control the future of linancial affairs. He must meet his pecuniary engagements, and any persistence in an arbitrary course would paralizehis efforts. Even with the utmost care and caution he cannot afford to disturb the market in which he must be a borrower for years to come. Within three years there fall due nearly one thousand millions in Treasury paper, which must either be funded or paid. If there is any contraction, will not every holder insist on payment?

We are thus prepared to see that for sometime to come neither the people nor their rulers are likely to engage voluntarily in the work of contraction. It it depends on mere volition, we see no controlling will strong enough to set the work in motion, while many selfish interests are ever busy in efforts to continue the unnatural excitement. When it comes, as it must some day, in spite of all that would perpetuate the inflation, it will probably come unheralded, but most certainy will not be led by human agency. All factions will unite to resist it. All who writhe under it will cry out against it. Political leaders may indeed recommend it at a safe distance, but none will be found bold enough to begin the experiment: It may come in gradual approaches, stealing its way quietly along the shrinking nerves, or it may ome in sudden convulsions, but it will never find the community prepared for it, or ready to welcome it. Nature does a kindly work when she racks the frame in her faithful struggles to throw off a dangerous disease; but what patient ever submitted to the process without a groan? Those who are laying their plans for the future may therefore rest assured that none of the methods of contraction which have been suggested will be adopted voluntarily, either by the people or their representatives at Washington. All of the talk to this effact is the merest buncombe, and will lead to no corresponding action. If we could stop the present leak in the Treasury, and bring the expenses of the Government within reasonable limits, we could save several hundred millions annually to apply to the maturing debt. This would facilitate the funding of the remainder, both at home and abroad, and through this policy the country might return to a safer system, without any upheaval of the foundation of credit, or the breaking down of existing financial institutions.

More About the Cattle Plague. Dr. Edward Crisp, in a letter to the British Lords of the Privy Council," which we find published in a late number of the Mark Lane Express, presents as the result of his invesigations the following:

1. That the so-called "cattle plague" or typhus fever bears but slight resemblance, either in its symptoms or morbid appearances to the typhus or typhoid fever of man.

2. That looking to the symptoms and pathological changes, and especially to the rapid recovery in some cases, the malady bears a greater resemblance to some exanthematous liseases in the human subject, affecting in rudiments, chiefly the nucous membrane.

3. That the specific poison of this disease alters the condition of the blood, and effects For ordinary men, $40 per year. For boys between fifteen and twenty, from especially certain parts of the nervous system paralyzing the digestive organs, and thus sap-ping the foundations of life.

6. That there is no sufficient proof that the meat of bulls, cows, oxen, calves and sheep, in the first stage of the disease, is injurious to human beings who partake of it.

7. That the poison of "cattle plague" (with the exception of a papular eruption on the skin,) produces no injurious effects when introduced into the human system.

Following this statement the Doctor says: How the general opinion that the malady is of a typhoid character, can have gained ground, I am at a loss to understand ; for not only are the morbid appearances of the sheep and ox essentially different to those in typhoid fever, but the symptoms bear little or no re-semblance to those present in these diseases. The animal in "cattle plague" is very often in some districts fatally stricken down in 24 hours, with scarcely a premonitory symptom. Of the one hundred and sixty oxen that died at Crown Point, Norwich, the average duration of the attack was nearly twenty-four relations, begin this reconciliation at once. Renew the attention of earlier days. hours, and scarcely one of these animals was treated, so rapid was the progress of the disease. All of them died. The deadly poison exerted its subtle and baneful influence for several days, as I believe, without external manifestations; and then, when too late for remedial measures, the animals succumbed.
It is this concealed and latent character of the disease, as I said in my last letter, that renat home, you must be happy abroad; the man or woman who has settled down upon the ders all movements of cattle and sheep so conviction that he or she is attached for life

The chief symptoms of this disease in cattle are described by Dr. Crisp to be in oxen, fever, with alternate paroxysms of heat and cold; dull watery eyes, with redness of conjunctive membrane; discharges from nose and mouth; anxious and melancholy expression of countenance; the head down, the ears than one agricultural journal, that the best back; arched spine, staring coat, redness of the mouth and fauces, feeble and quick way to protect young fruit trees-such as apples, cherries, &c.—against frost, is to apply a good mulch of manure or straw. pulse; prestration of strength; staggering gait; loss of appetite and cessation of the ruminating process; quick respiration moan-ing and groaning; short, dry cough (some-times;) tenderness about the lumbar region about; otherwise the mulch will prove a of the spine; in cows, suppression of the lacteal secretion, redness of the rectum and vagina, in many instances; constipation often in the first stage, followed by diarrhea of "What ugly, carroty-headed little brat is that, Mrs. Smith? BALTIMORE CARDS. THE PLEDGE. BY THE BARD OF MARRIE HALL. In Baltimore, famed for ladies fair, Lived a beautiful girl with flaxen bair, And bonny blue eyes with liquid light, And roscate lips, a glorious sight.

The youngsters fell in love by dozens. Frierds and acquaintances, strangers and cous ine;
But she a crotchet had got in her head,
And said she determined never to wed

Until she loved a handsome youth

Who would grant all her requests in truth,
And bind him fully never to break
The pledge he had taken for her sake. The young men stood aghast with fear; Some whacked their boots, some pulled their hair; Some said 'twas religion, some said 'twas money; But it took them aback and they felt quite funry.

Among them there was a fine young men; Says he, "I love her as well as I can. Now I'll make her the promise, both open and free, And agree to stand by it whatever it be."

The fair one stepped up to his side, And said, "Should I now be your bride, You must promise here before us all, To buy your clothes at MARBLE HALL.

No other can suit a husband of mine, The coats are so handsome, the pants divine." Says Juhiny, a laughing, "You dear little elf. If you like them so well, get a pair for yourself."

At the outset, we did not have the condition precedent announced—the passage of the Constitutional amendment by our Legislaures It followed however, and our States ratified it. Then came the demand for the the days of the Confederacy—that has been acquiesced in. Then that our people must choice. Some of the States even consented to this; others could not give up the little of manliness left, and refused. It would seem now that the demands keep rising just in the proportion that they are complied with.

This is neither fair nor equitable. The conviction forces itself upon us that ll our sacrifices of feeling, our deep and profound humiliations, are to go for nothing; and that, as far as the Republican party is con-cerned, we are to be stripped of all restored rights, and dependent for the little, the very ittle, existence we have, to the bounty of our masters! Their action does not comport with that of the President, who sought "to restore the constitutional relations of the States" by inviting them "to participate in daily.

The truth is, they desire no restoration.

Owing to the sickness of our hands, completely disqualifying them for service in the office, and our inability to procure other assistance, the issue of our paper this week has Been delayed beyond the usual day of publication. We regret this, but it was entirely beyond our control. From the same causes we shall be unable to issue the Spirit again before the 2d day of January, after which we expect to issue the paper regularly on its day of publication.

CONCRESSIONAL ACTION.

The Radical members of Congress, we are told by some of our cotemporaries, show signs of relenting in their action toward the Southern States, but we confess that we have been unable to see it. Every report from Washington tunvinces us that they daily grow more bot in their ways. It is true that there is a whost of a chance for the members from Tennessee being allowed to participate in the action of the House, and the shade of a ghost of a chance for those from Virginia who can take the test oath; but beyond this we see nothing but continued disunion. It is evidently the firm determination of the majority of the lower House, to keep back the reconstruction of the Union, for which we were formerly told the war was waged; till such time as the Southern States shall certainly signify their willingness to extend the right of suffrage to the negro, and otherwise put them upon terms of full and perfect political, and may be social, equality with the white race. We can put no trust in men of the Sumner and Wilson and Farnsworth school of legislators. They have had, all their lives long, negro on the brain, and the disease is so absorbing in its character, that everything else must be subjected to it-constitutions, laws, justice and the commonest rights, must all be trampled under foot for the purpose of elevating the negro to the standard of the white man. And, in the meantime, while this ridiculous tilt is being made, the Southern States are to remain out of the Union, and the Southern people to be refused any participation in the government of the country—except the right to pay taxes. We, of the South, have met the isness, and have renewed our allegiance to the the right to be treated as citizens of the Union, and we look to the President to furnish to us the protecting power of the Constitution, in the sure hope that he will do his duty by us; if he fails in this duty, may God help us!

CORRECTION.

We desire to correct the impression, which many of our citizens are erroneously under, that the Legislature of Virginia repealed all laws giving the consent of the State to the erection of West Virginia. The first section of the former bill, recited in the bill lately passed at Richmond, is not repealed. That rection creates the originally named fortyeight counties, lying beyond the North mountain, into the State of West Virginia. The second section naming the counties of Jefferson, Berkeley, Frederick, and others, is repealed-as is the case with all other bills giving the assent of Virginia, to the addition to West Virginia, of any other than the original forty-eight counties of which West Virginia was composed at the time of its admission into the Union by Congress. So far as these forty-eight counties are concerned, it was deemed that they had passed beyond the control of the Virginia Legislature-Congress having sanctioned their formation into the new State, and therefore the Legislature at Richmond did not interfere with them.

GENERAL BANKS.

We are at a loss to know how Gen. Banks could take the congressional test oath, which among other things, requires a man to swear that he has never given "aid and comfort" to the late so-called Confederate Army. It is well known that this redoubtable hero was for a long time Stonewall Jackson's Commissary General in the Valley, and subsequently acted in the same military capacity to Dick Taylor in Louisana, and yet we find him sworn in as a member of the House from Massachussetts.

THE BALL OPENED.

On Monday last, Thadeus Stevens, confessedly the radical leader, as he is unques-- tionably the ablest man of that party in the House of Representatives, opened the ball in Congress, in a speech which for its envenomed hatred to the South, stands unrivalled in the debates of this or any other abolition Congress. We copy from the Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sur, the following account of this speech:

Mr. Thadeus Stevens, in a speech of nearly an hour's duration, laid down the most ultra programme, even out-Heroding his famous aster speech made in September. He was listened with marked attention by the crowded galleries and the members of the House, the latter crowding around the speaker, while a goodly portion of the Senators were also present.

Mr. Stevens read his carefully prepared manuscript. He started out with the broad declaration that the States lately at war with the Covernment were not in the Union, and that in they were admitted again, they must come in a new States or conquered provinces after passing through a territorial condition.

He elaborated the argument that the so-called Confederate States were belligerents, and that during the war, according to the decisions of the United States Supreme Court and international law, the respective parties "streed in the same relation to each other as if they them 1. public enemies, he maintained that the government had the right to treat them the government had the right to treat them as conquered provinces. Among the requirements which he advocated as precedent to the readmission of these States was the amendment of the constitution so that their could be an election for President and a presentation in Congress on the basis of population. This, by recognizing the colored people of the Routh, would give the new States an increas-

He proceeded to assume that Congre should control the freedmen, for if left to themselves, their present condition would be worse than bondage, or the horrors of Andersonville. He made light of the ratificaishing slavery, by the Southern State Legislatures, which he denounced as illegal and delusive, and declared that this was not a white man's government, and looked upon Chief Justice Taney's virtual declaration that it was, the most infa nous doctrine of all time! He added that it was fortunate that the whole question of restoration belonged with Congress.

AFFAIRS AT WASHINGTON.

SOUTHERN REPRESENTATIVES. Washington, December 13.—The House to-day accepted, without debate, the Senate modification of the House resolution for the appointment of a joint committee of fifteen on reconstruction. Mr. Stevens, after due consultation with several Senators this morning, determined to accede to the position assumed by the Senate. It was, therefore, on his own motion that the House took it from the Speaker's table and passed it nem con.—
The joint committee therein authorized will probably not be announced before Monday.

Horace Greeley still talks on for reconstruction, but it is of that kind which may be practicalle without peril to the Republi-can ascendancy. Considerations of party are the misfortune of this whole matter. A distinguished Republican, of the rank of majorgeneral, recently said to me that if the thing were left to soldiers of the Union and rebel armies, who fraternize everywhere, they would settle it at short order.

Caucussing in quiet is the feading business now of Congressmen and other politicians .-Thaddeus Stevens stirs around among the members, which fact indicates that he is not having things all his own way. The contest between Schenck and Sherman for the Senatorship in Ohio is understood to be close. It may be affected by the reconstruction question. It is understood that on to-morrow both. branches of Congress will adjourn over until Monday, and from that day until after Christmas. It is also understood in Republican party circles that the credentials and other papers of Southern Senators and Representatives are to be referred to the joint select committee, to sleep until the end of the ses-

Mr. Forney sticks to his text on the ques-

But we incline to the opinion that this is a sort of middle ground that he is occupying between the President and the majority in Congress, and from which he can hereafter go over to either side: He says: "Now that it is clear that no party can stand up against the irresistible doctrine that the States are all in the Union, the admission of Senators and Representatives will be a personal question; whether the individual appli cant has borne arms against the Union, or whether he can take the above-printed Congressional oath? Thus, a State like Alabama may send six applicants for admission into the House of Representatives, three of whom can, and three of whom cannot, take the oath. The first three will be received, the last three returned to their constituents. who, if they choose, can perform the farce of John Wilkes to their own satisfaction as often as they pleas?",

The New York Evening Post, always a radical paper, advocates the President's policy openly-a good indication. It thus speaks of some of its party friends:

"The whole subject of reconstruction would have been, we have no doubt, wisely disposed of by the standing committees; but unless the special committee is constituted with more discretion than the movers of it have yet displayed, we fear the question will be treated in a spirit of extreme partisanship wither than of statesmanship. There are unfortunately a few men in Congress who would like to see the present abnormal condition of things protracted; they do not scruple to speak of the late Confederate States as conquered and subjected provinces, as if we breathed the very air of the Austrian bareaux; and they express a willingness to hold them in vassalage for an indefinite period of time. The influence of such on the committee could only be deleterious."

VIRGINIA AND WEST VIRGINIA. Considerable surprise is manifested here at the receipt of a letter from Governor Peirpoint, of Virginia, addressed to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House. enclosing a copy of an act passed by the General Assembly of Virginia repending the assent heretofore given to the division of the State by the formation of the State of West Virginia. The letter was printed and laid upon the desks of members, and attracted

It seems that the question first came up in the Virginia Legislature on a bill to settle the status of the two counties of Jefferson and Berkeley, in the Shenandoah Valley, which have been in disputed jurisdiction. This act was so amended as to repeal the assent given in 1863 to the formation of West Virginia. In order to be effective, the assent of the latter State must be had, as it has been recognized by all the departments of the Government, legislative, executive and judicial.

SECOND DISPATCH. Washington, December 14 .- It is said that Stanton declines to deliver the Lincoln anniversary oration. Beecher said, in a lecture last night, if he had been President last May he would have insisted on negro suffrage in the South. The views of Banks on the Mexican question is understood to be conservative. He will agree with Raymond who is second on the committee. They will both support the foreign policy of the Administration.

The Comptroller of the Treasury desires attention called to the fact that certain parties in this city are endeavoring to raise, by means of a contribution of the various national banks, a corruption fund of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars for the purpose of subsidizing certain members of Congress, in order to Secure the passage of an amendment to the currency act, giving these banks the ben-efit of their lost circulation. This scheme Mr. Clark discountenances altogether, and recommends that the Lanks which have already contributed their quota, immediatel demand the refunding of the money advanced for so dishonorable a purpose.

THE BANKBUPTEY BILL.

The bill introduced into the House of Representatives on the 11th inst., to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States, provides :-

1. That the District Courts of the United States shall be constituted courts of bankruptoy, and that they shall have original ju- in contact with the people in connection with matters and proceedings in bankruptcy. It also provides that the several Circuit Courts of the United States within and for the districts where the proceedings in bankruptcy shall be pending shall have a general superintendence and jurisdiction of all cases and questions arising under this act.

2. Provision is made for the appointment of Registers in Bankruptcy, to assist the Judge of the District Court in the performance of his duties under this act. The Register must be a lawyer, and must give bond to the United States. He must also be able to subscribe the oath of office approved by Congress in July, 1862. The duties of the Register in Bankruptcy are clearly marked out for him, at length, in the bill. 4: An appeal may be taken from the Disfriet to the Circuit Court in all eases; but no appeal shall be allowed in any case from the District and Circuit Courts, unless it is claimed, and notice given thereof to the Clerk of the District Court, to be entered with the record of the proceedings, and also to the assigned or creditor, as the case may be, or to the defeated party in equity, within ten days after the decision appealed from. No appeal or writ of error shall be allowed in any case from the Circuit Courts to the Supreme Court of the United States, unless the matter in dispute in such case shall exceed two thousand dollars. 4. The bill sets forth at length how to commence and continue proceeding under it in the courts designated. It also directs the manner of making assignments, and defines the duties of the assignee, the examination of bankrupts, and the distribution of the bankrupt's estate. 5. It provides certain penalties against bankrupts who shall, after proceedings have been commenced, secrete, destroy, or part the assignee. It enacts severe penalties a-gainst any officer who shall take bribes from parties interested in any case of bankruptcy.

VIRGINIA ON RECONSTRUCTION.

In the Virginia House of Delegates, on Monday, the following resolutions were submitted and laid on the table:

Resolved by the General Assembly of Virginia, That the General Government, unlike the absolute systems of the earth, that recognize obedience only, having given allowand to conflicting theories of sovreignty and allegiance that have existed from its formation, inviting opposing debates by the people, as shown in some degree by the preamble above, will, we earnestly hope, induce his Excellency the President of the United States to extend a general pardon to those persons now confined by the authority of the Government.

Resolved, That it is not the desire of the people of Virginia to obstruct or retard the estoration of the States to their Constitution al position and functions in the General Govrument, but that, in common with all good men, North and South, it is their sincere and earnest wish, by all honorable means, to promote the same; that a firm re-union, with peace, prosperity and happiness, may every

LOCKL MISCELLANY BUSINESS NOTICE.

In resuming the publication of this paper our intention was to adhere as closely to the Cash System, as the impoverished condition of the country would justify, and to this end, fected and announced responsible agents in different parts of the county, to whom our subscribers might, as a matter of convenience, pay there subscriptions. A large proportion of our patrons however, seem to indulge the rehonsion that we are still pursuing the old credit system, and that they can pay their subscriptions any time during the year, or any time thereafter. DEATH OF AN ESTEEMED CIPIZEN .- Our whole community was shocked on Saturday sudden and unexpected death of JAMES D. GIBSON, whose spirit was summoned from earth on Friday hight, by an attack of appoplexy. No man in the county was perhaps more generally known than Mr. G., and we cles, the many others, are of the most rare are sure that the news of his death will be and select kind, and we'll worthy the attenreceived with unfeigned sorrow by all who knew him. On Thursday, the day previous to his death, we saw him on our streets, apparently in the enjoyment of perfect health; only a few hours later, and the tidings are borne to us that his spirit has quit its earthly tenement, and gone to the presence of that God who dealeth mercifully with the children of men. Thus are we reminded of the Scrip- ladies and gentlemen of the town and neightural admonition; "In the midst of life we are in death." Mr. G. at one time represented this county in the Legislature of Virginia, was subsequently a Deputy Sheriff, and filled other positions in which he was brought risdiction in their respective districts in all | their public interests. As a neighbor, he was beloved and respected; as a citizen, he was him; as a friend, he was genial, kind and market. cordial. And if we were permitted to invade the sanctuary of home, which will no longer be lit up with the cheering presence of his lively disposition, we might say that as a hus band he was devoted and affectionate, and as a father, tender and indulgent. It is here that his departure will be most painfully felt, as his sorrowing family realize that Not to return how painful the remembrance! It is not our purpose, however, to attempt to create the impression that the deceased led a blameless life, but those who knew him well, were ever ready to confess "That even his failings leaned to virtue's side." With his body are his faults entombed, whilst we trust that his virtues may live after him, and shine with brighter lustre for the imitation of those who survive him. "Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see.

Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor e'er shall be."

ANOTHER FATAL ACCIDENT .- Hardly a week has passed since we resumed our paper that we have not had to record some accident resulting either in the loss of life or the fracture of a limb. This week we are called upon to publish another accident, resulting fatally, on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, near Kearneysville, in this county, which occurred on Tuesday evening last, a little after dark. Mr. FRANK O. CANIFORD, an employee of with any part of his property, with the intent to prevent it from coming into the hands of had been paid off, and with others was returning to his home near Duffield's Station, when he was run over by one of the coal trains, and received such injuries as terminated his life in half an hour after. The deceased leaves a wife and four children, who derived their sole support from his labor .-He was from Clarke, county, where his remains were taken for interment. Patrick Rogers, another employee, who was with Caniford at the time of the accident, started to a farm house near by for assistance, but before reaching it, fell through the culvert near the Deep Cut, and received some very painful, if not serious injuries.

THEFT .- On Tuesday night last, the smok house of Lieut, D. H. Cockrell of this town was entered by means of a false key, and the entire amount of sausage, which he had just seasoned to his taste and hung up for family supply, was found minus in the morning. The pork was left undisturbed, but the rogue took off a hundred pounds or more of nicely pickled beer. The Lieutenant, as others we have heard, swears vengcance against similar depredators. So we give warning "to all whom it may concern," to look out; "save your own bacon" if you can, but let other people's alone.

CHRISTMAS-ITS ATTRACTION Before another issue of our paper, Christ-

one and all of our readers, a merty time.-It is meet that our people should observe the approaching festive season, as its advent for the four past years, has been marred by the mad carnival of war. It is true many a household will miss from the family circle, when gathered for the Christmas feast, some loved and cherished one, who yearned to his native home, " alas not wisely, but too well." Peace to their memories, and let us be resigned to look to the "living future." In consideration of the fact that we have been in a state of blockade for the few years past, and the usual concomitants of Christmas was to juveniles; as well as those of older growth, "but an idle dream," our mer-chants, confectioners, Ac., have been lavish in their expenditures to supply all demands and gratify all tastes. -The Messrs. Haines, next door, have enlarged their stock of smoking and chewing obacco, cigars, pipes, &c., and we venture to assert they have on hand some brands of both the raw and manufactured article, that cannot be surpassed in the Valley.

- Blessing assures that "old Kriss" will come this year, freighted with every article in the line of toys, fruits, candies, cakes, nuts, &c., that can please the fancy or gratify the taste. Blessing's name will therefore, soon be again, as was the won't in former time, as "as familiar as bousehold words," if not as agreeable to these with empty purses. -Mr. Goldsmith, as will be seen by reference to advertisements in another column, has just received a large addition to his stock, peculiarly suited to the season. The catalogue is too numerous to specify, but either ladies or gentlemen will find on examination, any and every article adapted to their wants. - Messrs. Campbell & Mason have added largely to their fancy and stationery stock. and it now embraces some as beautiful and attractive specimens as can be found in the town, even at this proline season. - Henry Dumm has so fully set! forth, brough advertisement, the inducements he will offer for Christmas and its holydays, that we need but invoke attention to insure him a kindly remembrance. -Foreman, at his auction store, opposite the bank, has opened a perfect Bazaar.

Every thing in the toy line, that ever has been or ever will be made, is to be found on his shelves.

The Augusta Telegraph says that Hon. E. M. Bruce, formerly a member of the Confederate Congress from Kentucky, now a banker and cotton factor in Augusta, Ga., has sent to Gen. John C. Breckenridge, now an exile from the land of his birth, a check for one hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Bruce is understood to have speculated largely and successfully during the last year of the Confederacy.

Died.

In this place, on the 12th inst., SARAH FRAN-CES, eldest daughter of D. Smith and Mary Eichel-berger, in the 15th year of her age.

The demise of this young lady was sudden and unexpected. But a few days before she was serm-ingly in her usual bouyant health, and up to within a few hours of her death no aluming symptoms were apparent. But, alas, the Destroyer had mark-ed her for his own, and the evening of the third day of her illness she calinly yielded her spirit to flun who gave it. who gave it.

Of a modest and retiring disposition, all her affections and pleasures were centered in her home, the Sabbath School and the ministrations of the Charch, and her short pilgrapege on earth has left behind only the most endearing and affections terms membranices.

AND STORY SEPTEMBERS OF MALE TAR THE PLEDGE.

BY THE BARD OF MARRIE HALL. In Baltimore, famed for ladies fair, Lived a beautiful girl with flaxen hair, And count blue eyes with liquid light, And reseate fips, a glorious sight.

But she a croicher had got in her head, And said she determined ner ato wed;

Until she loved a handsome youth
Who would grant all her requests in truth,
And bird him fully never to break.
The pledge he had taken for her sake,

The young men stood aghast with fear;
Some whacked their boots, some pulled their hair;
Some said 'twas religion, same said 'twas money;
But it took them aback and they felt quite funry.

Among them there was a fine young man;
Says he, "I love her as well as I can,
Now I'll make her the promise, both open and free.
And agree to stand by it whatever it be." The fair one stepped up to his side, 'And said, "Should I now be your bride, You must promise here before us all, To buy your clothes at MARBLE HALL.

We offer unusual inducement in all kinds of Clothing and Furnishing Goods, together with a superior line of piece goods for custom work. Hoy s Clothing a special feature.

Strely there are many people in the South who will u ite in an effort to revive a newspaper which was an ornament to its literature and a school for its virtues. The task is an ambitious one. But the undersigned attempts it in no mean or flagging spirit. He has already endertaken to marshal a corps of the old writers for the Examiner che will be able to reproduce its typographical features, and present to Southern readers a fac simile of their old acquaintance; and he Jervently trusts and resolutely pledges every resource of intellect and will to breathe again in this form of material resurrection the same spirit of fearless criticism, chivalrous contest and unhesitating encounter with abuse that anin ared it of old. The undersigned owes some pledges of affection in this enterprise. His relation with the late John M. Daniel were close, intimate and affectionate to the day of his death. And it will indeed be a lathe day of his death. And it will indeed be a labor and inspiration of love if he can produce some echo from the grave of lamented triendship and rekin le from the ashes of the past and the dead some of the fire that illuminated the familiar pages of our literatures.

In the present uncertainty of political questions—the displacement of old issues and the imperfect development of the new—it would of course be impossible to state with preission the political rareer of the Examiner. Dr. W. F. ALEXANDER OFFERS his Professional Services to the citi-zens of the neighborhood of Duffield's Depot lefferson county. November 7-1565.

PROFESSIONAL CARD. PROFESSIONAL CARD.

To the public, that, being relieved of engagements and difficulties, which for several years have necessarily drawn largely upon my fine and attention, and more or less embarrassed the discharge of professional duty, I intend, it my life be spared, to devote the next ten years exclusively to a faithful pursuit of my profession.

I will give especial attention to that branch of practice which has been my main study from the commencement of my experience— The Dischars or Females and Children — and in order to a successful management, I will avail myself of the Lattest Improvements in incidicines and appliances.

TO THE POPLE OF THE SOUTH.

THE OLD "EXAMINER" REVIVED. The undersigned, having purchased its good will and subscription books, proposes to revive, at an early day, the old

RICHMOND EXAMINER, of which the late John M. Daniels was editor-in of which the late John M. Daniels was editor-inchiel, and the undersigned his constant associate for the entire period of the war.

It is believed that the public will recognise an appropriate and practical idea in this enterprise.—

Efforts to revive other papers in the South are announced, and it is certainly neither a vissionary nor unworthy endeavour for the literary associates of a gallant spirit that now sleeps in the grave to sessay honor to his memory and a service to the pubof a gallant spirit that now sleeps in the grave to essay honor to his memory and a service to the public by reviving the old Examiner nowspaper, so long the ornament of Southern letters, ian example at once of the scholarship and chivalry of Virginia, and perhaps the only school in the South of pure and classic English, distinct from the models and redeemed from the innovations of Northern instruc-

The Fame of the old Rt hmond Examiner reached to the most distant paris of the world. The paper was well known in Europe It was pronounced by a distinguished Northern politician, 'the best exponent of the civilization of the South.' It was a school of literary scholarship for the youth of the South; the glass of Southern chivalry; an example of independence, of country, of iron spirit in newspaper literature, which its chief ilustrated in his own noble and severe life, and defended, more than once on the field of honor, where the undersigned stood on the field of honor, where the undersigned stood with him in the vindication of the freedom of the

Surely there are many people in the South who will u lite in an effort to revive a newspaper which was an ornament to its literature and a school for its virtues. The task is an ambitious one. But the undersigned attempts it in no mean or flagging spirit. He has already undertaken to marshal a corps of the old writers for the Examiner; he will be able to reproduce its typographical features, and present to Southern renders a fuc simile of their old acquaintance; and he tervently trusts and resolutely pledges every resource of intellect and will to breathe again in this form of material resurrection the same spirit of fearless criticism, chivalrous contest and unhesitating encounter with abuse

The undersigned owes some pledges of affection in this enterprise. His relation with the late John M. Daniel were close, intimate and affectionate to the day of his death. And it will indeed be a labor and inspiration of love if he can produce some echo from the grave of lamented triendship and re-kindle from the ashes of the past and the flead some of the fire that iluminated the familiar pages of our

In the present uncertainty of political questions— the displacement of old issues and the imperfect de-velopment of the new—it would of course be impossible to state with preiscion the poil cal career of the Examiner. But this may be said with sale y, that it wiluse all its influence in restoring order, tranquility and prosperity to the people; and while aspiring to be brave and independent, it will avoid every scheme of faction and disorganization; devote itself to the work of conservatism, and sustain at every risk the present President of the United States, as long as he fulfills those noble indications he has all ready given of planting again the rights of constitutional liberty in the South, setting his face against the calignants of the North, and thus entitling himself o such common support of conservative men in all parts of the country as will secure the continuation of his wise and patriotic adminis-

No pains or expense will be spared to make the Examiner the news, aper of the South. For every department of it the services of the most accomplish. ed and active writers will be secured. Special correspondents will be posted in New York and Washection with Am and topics. This correspondence will constitute a special feature of interest in our paper, it will enliven its columns from week to week wi h the productions of an animated, pen ; and it will afford our readers a singularly good opportunity to make thems selves acquainted with cotemporary Europe, and to apprehend the growing interest of our fcreign rela-

The undersigned was recently the editor of the Richmond Times, but in consequence of a disagree-ment with the past proprietor of that paper, he has been forced to I ave it and appeal to the civil courts for his rights; and he now proposes to himself the nobler task of reviving a paper endeared to the South by many memories of the past, and associated with so much that is admirable in its heroic and literary name in history. He calls upon the old-subscribers of the Examiner, from Virginia to Texas, to rall to its support, to renew their subscriptions, and to assist in the revival of a paper which has existed for three quarters of a century, and which has ever been solicitous to honour truth and virtue, prompt to chastise abuses, and ambitious to defend and adorn the civilization and literature

Terms of Subscription. DAILY-One year in advance,$8.00. Six months, in advance, 5.00

Three months in advance, 3 00 One month, in advance, 1.00 SEMI-WEEKLY-One year in advance, ... 5 00 Six months, in advance, 3.00 WEEKLY-One year, in advance, 3.00 Six months, in advante, 2:00 Advertisements will be inserted on the same terms as published by the other Richmond papers.

The first number of the Examiner will contain a sketch of the life of the late John M. Daniel, whose name is historical in connection with the Virginia press, and than whom the annals of newspaper literature in America show few more extraordinary men-certainly no greater master of vigor and satire in composition. The first numbers will also contain a full and complete account of the evacuation of Richmond, with all the particulars of the surrender of the city, the entry of the troops, the great con-flagration, &c., taken from the advance sheets of E. A. Pollard's "Fourth Year of the War," now in press' This account will be found intensely interesting, and aside from this consideration, every one should secure an i preserve these numbers, as they will be valuable hereafter as afford ng a true and faithful report of what the South has hitherto but imperfect narratives which have been written and published in Northern papers.

The old contributors and correspondents of the Examiner are particularly requested to communicate with the undersigned,

All letters and communications of every character should be addressed to

H. RIVES POLLARD, Richmond, Va. Wanted, an Agent in every town in Virginia and all the Southern States Also, immediately, twenty active and enterprising men to travel and canvass for the paper—a fine chance for men out of business.
