VIRGINIA, TUESDAY JUNE 23, 1868. CHARLESTOWN,

[From the Southern Opinion.] MAJOR JAMES W. THOMPSON. Stuart Horse Artillery, A. N. V.

[We have never enjoyed the pleasure of publishing, in the Southern Opinion, an article of deeper interest than the following, from one of our most esteemed contributors. To the people of Richmond especially, this account of the heroic life and services of. Major James Thomson must appeal with spe- be told: cial force.-ED.]

It is with surprise and regret that we often hear persons, and especially our noble Southern women, who bore with such heroic fortitude their part in our late and lamented Confederate struggle, saying : "Don't talk about the war; I never want to hear the subject mentioned again." And they seem to turn pale, and even shudder, when we speak of the awful past, and of the brave deeds of those who fell, sacrificing their lives to a seemingly ungrateful country. We contend that all such persons make a great mistakenay, more, that they commit a grievous wrong against our immortal dead; that it is our bounden duty to recall to mind every day and hour what they have done. Their memory demands that their heroic acts, their patient endurance, their daring courage, and their devotion to their country's cause, should ever be kept fresh and green in the hearts of their posterity. And whose duty is it to do this but their surviving comrades? And it is this spirit which new prompts your correspondent to present to your readers a brief account of the life and heroism of Major James W. Thomson, of the Stuart Horse Arillery-an officer universally known and admired by the whole Army of Northern Virginia, and a son of John A. Thomson, Esq., of Jefferson county, Virginia-a gentleman who has filled several prominent public offices.

At the age of seventeen, Thomson entered the Virginia Military Institute, as a cadet, taking a respectable stand in his class, and making himself generally popular with all his ellow students by his open, frank, manibearing. Few knew "Jemmy," as we all called him, better than I did. We attended the same school; sat on the same bench; played pranks on our Yankee teacher : fought each other; hunted together; rode races; and, in short, were ever the best of friends. and I can truly say, a more warm-hearted generous man never lived. The first instance of his bravery occurred in Lexington, Virginia, in the spring of 1861, when the animosity between "Union men" and "segessionists" had reached its climax.

Soon after the John Brown raid, military companies were generally organized in Virginia, and amongst the first was the Rockbridge Rifles, composed mainly of mechanics and clerks living in the town of Lexington, who were to a man violently opposed to secession. Being quite well drilled, handsomely uniformed, and armed with the best Enfield. rifles, a jealousy naturally sprang up between this company and the Cadets, and the wide difference in political opinions-for the Cadets were all secessionists-tended in no way to lessen their animosity. One Saturday, in the latter part of April, '61, it was determined by the members of the Rifles that they would erect a "Union flag," and accordingly an enormous pine tree was brought to the court house square, and all the "Union" men in the county invited to attend. At the appointed hour the streets were filled with men : whiskey flowed freely, as is generally the case on such occasions, and many of the mechanics became quite drunk. Vehement Union speeches were made, and the pole was slowly raised, much to the disgust of the secessionists and especially of the Cadets, standing on the street corners, for it was a holiday, among whom were Thomson and his friend Lee, a brother of Maj. Gen. Fitz Lee. When the pole had been raised about half way, one of the ropes suddenly broke, and down it fell with a tremendous crash, broken in three pieces. A triumphant shout went up from the-Cadets, secessionists and college students, followed by hisses and groans on the part of the mechanics. As the pole fell, Lee exclaimed: "O, I am so glad!" A mechanic who had taken a prominent part in the affair, and who was quite drunk, a powerful man, twice Lee's size, stepped up, cursed him, and jerking out a long knife, made a pass at him .-Thomson seized his arm before he could make another stroke, and drawing a revolver, put it to his head, and turning to Lee said: "Must I fire?" The mechanic struggled violently and tried to stab Thomson; a crowd gathered round, and many shouted to him to fire. He did so, but fortunately, Lee knocked up his arm and the ball passed harmlessly over the mechanic's head. At this instant, Sergeant Edmonston (afterwards the distinguished Col. Edmonston, of the 27th Virginia infantry and commandant, for some time, of the Stonewall brigade,) stepped up, by order of the major, a violent Union man, and arrested Thomson and Lee, to take them to jail. Fifty Cadet voices immediately shouted "They shan't go; they were only defending themselves; and if they are taken to jail, it must be over our bodies." The major called out the Rifle company to carry out his orders. and while they were getting their arms. Thomson and Lee were carried off by their friends. While this was going on in front of the court house, at the lower end of town, a large mechanic, a member of the Rifles insulted and beat most unmercifully a small Cadet, a mere boy, cutting his face and causing it to bleed that of the Rifles beat a defiant reply. One and aimed them at the mechanics, forming ranks in front of the court house about threequarters of a mile off. At this juncture Major Gilham (afterwards professors came running up, and in vain ordered the Cadets back to barracks; but seeing them determined to fight, he called out : "For God's sake, if you are going to fight; fight in ranks." Sub-professor McCausland (afterwards Brigadier General McCausland, of Chambersburg notoriety.) who sided with the Cadets, put himself at their head, formed son should not go to jail, and that he would have the mechanic arrested who drew the knife. He was followed by Major Preston, Professors White and Nelson, of Washington College, and finally by a few remarks from Major (Stonewall) Jackson, pleding that full justice should be done them, and at last they were persuaded to return to barracks. The most remarkable part of this affair is yet to

That night news arrived in Lexington of Lincoln's proclamation for seventy-five thousand troops, and of the passage of the ordinance of secession by the Virginia Convention. Two days afterwards, a vote was taken in this same rifle company, and more than a hundred men offered their services to Governor Letcher to defend their native State ; and in less than a week, the company, under the command of Capt. Sam Letcher, together with eighty Cadets, and among them Jemmy Thomson and the mechanic, marched from Lexington cheering each other as they moved off-the Rifles to Harper's Ferry, and the Cadets to Richmond. What a proof of the devotion of Virginia's sons to their noble mother. When she called, private hatred, that a few days before was sufficient to end in bloodshed, was instantly buried, and hand in hand, shoulder to shoulder, they went to do their bidding. Between fifteen and twenty of the Rockbridge Rifles were among the first to stain with their life blood the bare clay hills of Manassas on the 21st of July, 1861, where, in the Fifth Virginia infantry, they helped to make Jackson's Storewall

Brigade immortal. From Richmond, Thomson was ordered to Harper's Ferry, with several Cadets, to act as drill-masters for the troops under Johnston; and when that officer marched from the Valley to reinforce Beauregard at Manassas, he was acting as aid-de-camp to Gen'l Jackson, and, for gallant condict in that engagement, he was highly recommended by the General and others for a Lieutenancy, showing their just appreciation of his merits. In the fall of 1861, he obtaine absence and visited his home in Jefferson county, and there found Ashby operating near Charlestown. On account of unusual gallantry exhibited in a skirmish near Harper's Ferry, Ashby had him transferred to his headquarters, and soon he was known throughout the whole Lower Valley as the 'man who was always in front." And once his father, meeting a soldier in the road below Charlestown, asked him if he knew where he could find his son. Be replied:

" If you mean that figuting Cadet, Thomson, you will find him down on the banks of the Potomac, nearest the Yankees; we never see him back here, he loves a skirmish too much for that."

After Ashby had fallen back to Winchester, Thomson, accompanied by his cousin and a few friends, set out to scout near Smithfield; and, about a mile from the village, while William Thomson and himself were riding some distance in advance of the rest. they came suddenly upon two Yankees, whom they ordered to surrender. Without replying. the Yankees fired, wounding Wm. Thomson's horse and causing him to stop, but Jemmy dashed up to them and again demanded their surrender; one immediately gave up his arms, but the other refused. At this instant he saw that they were the advance guard of a company that was only a short distance be-hind, and knowing that his life depended upon haste, he a second time ordered the Yankee to surrender, and upon his refusing, and seeing him cocking his gun, Jemmy put his revolver to his head and blew out his brains; and then making the other mount up behind him, galloped off amid a hail of bullets from the company. Finding that the. enemy were fast gaining on them, his friends called to him to put his prisoner down; but on he flew, till at last reaching a piece of wood, he told the rest to t ke one direction. while he took another, and thus he would get off with his man. This they did, and he had the satisfaction of seeing the Yankees take the road in pursuit of his companions, while he was left to continue his way at his leisure. Striking through the country, he reached Ashby's headquarters, several hour's in advance of the rest, and being flushed with his first success in spilling Yankee blood, he conducted his prisoner to Ashby's tent, saying as he entered :

"Colonel, I have brought you a prisoner. There were two of them, but I only brought one along." "Well, sir," said Arby, "where is the other?" "He wouldn't come, sir, and I shot him," was his laconic reply. In November Cadet Thomson assisted the celebrated Captain Chew in raising his battery of horse artillery, and was elected Seeond Lieutenant, and at Kernstown and the many engagements in which. Ashby's command took a conspicuous part, the thunder of his guns sent a thrill of terror to the heart of many a Yankee. Soon he became Ashby's "right hand man," and wherever the black plume of the "Valley Chiestain" could found, ever ready to go into the charge, or hurl his grape and canister into the ranks of if I let him stay he and be killed." the enemy. Ashby loved him as a brother. and when that noble hero fell, none mourned him more deeply than Jemmy. He was soon promoted to first lieutenant, and marched, in '62, to join Stuart, near Culpeper court house. He was a magnifiprofusely. Upon seeing this, the Cadets set | cent horseman, and a splendid shot with the | lantry displayed in the numberless engageoff at full speed for the institute, and in a revolver, and woe to the Yankee that he drew ments around Richmond and Petersburg, moment their drum beat the long roll, while a bead on. A striking proof of this came | Captain Thomson as promoted to major of hundred and sixty cadets promptly turned out with loaded muskets, while others dragged into position two six pound field pieces, loaded to the Rapidan.

A section of his battery, commanded by himself, was sent to support our regiment. (the Sixth Virginia cavalry), which was hotly engaged. Thomson ran his guns within a the Colonel of the Twenty-first Virginia in-fantry,) the commandant of the enemy's line of skirmishers, and opened on them with can-

His quickness is pointing out advantageous positions was most remarkable in an officer so | see you." I looked up and grasped Jemmy's young. He obe ed orders from his superior with the utmost exactness, no matter how much he was exposed in their execution. In February, 1,54, Captain Chew was promoted, and he succeeded to the command of the battery. At the cavalry fight at Trevilian's Station, while directing the firing of his guns, General Butler, of Hampton's command, rode up and said :

"Captain, I want a gun put there," pointing to a certain position. "General," replied Jemmy, "a gun could not stay there five minutes; every man and thorse would be killed before it could get into

"Nevertheless, I want a gun put there, Captain!" said the General. "Very well, sir: I shall do it," replied

Thomson in a firm tone. He conducted the gun to the spot in person, and sat on his horse by it while it opened fire. I less than five minutes, only one man of the nine working the gun remained unhurt, and three of them, his most intimate friends, were instantly killed His natural taste for the horse and sabre gave him a preference for the cavalry, but the independence of the Horse Artillery, and the difficulty of being promoted in cavalry, induced him to remain in the former service, to which he was attached during the whole war, earning for himself especial distinction. He always accompanied the cavalry on their soouts and raids, and was frequently put in command of squadrons, and led them in charges. He was ever more mindful of the safety of others than of himself, and whenever his friend would remonstrate with him for exposing himself so recklessly,

"Oh, the bullet that is to kill me has not been moulded yet."

he exclaimed:

His utter indifference to personal danger, shown in an engagement on the Back road, he replied: near Fisher's Hill, in October, 1864. General Rosser, with whom he was a great command of the Clarke cavalry and Orange Rangers, to act as advance guard. Near Thom's Brook, they overtook the rear guard. of the enemy, composed of a picked battalion. Drawing their sabres, the gallant Breathed and himself called upon their men to "follow." The Clarke cavaly was composed of men accustomed to do his, and their charge was irresistible. The nemy were in a road with high fences on bossides, which they had no time to pull dowr. Dashing into them with space, where a fresh brigade of the enemy was drawn up to receive them. Breathed now ordered a halt, to reorganize his men, who had become much scattened; and sent to Rosser for reinforcements. Captain Brown, of the Fifth, was sent with his squadron to his support, and Posser, turning to me, said : "Ride forward, and give my compliments tell them to push the enemy, but not sacrifice their men.' I shall never forget the appearance of these two officers as I delivered the order. Their sabres were dripping with blood, I counted more than forth of the enemy strewn along the road killed or wounded with the sabre alone. They had ismounted some of their men, who were stanishing with the enemy, strongly posted band a fence. The firing was terrific, and the bullets from their sixteen shooters rained like hail around Thomson as he rode backwards and forwards along the line cheering the men, and occasionally stopping to fire his revolver. His magnificent sorrel, "Ashby," covered with foam, prancing and rearing, rendered him a conspicuous mark, and the new moment the noble horse fell, mortally woulded. A private quickly offered him his, which he mounted. Being unaccustomed to such incessant fire, the animal plunged violently, and reared almost perpendicular as Jemmy discharged his re-

to Major Breathe and Captain Thomson, and the horse full in the breast, killing him instantly. At this moment Breathed ordered a charge. The enemy were driven back, but not without considerable loss or our side. Captain Morton, of the Ranges, was shot through the heart, and Captain rown through the breast. Procuring another horse, Thomson again dashed into the enemy, followed by Color Sergeant Ware, of his battery, and several of his men. Whilst endeavoring to reload his revolver, his brother Pembroke, a Cadet, not old enough to be in service, who was paying him a visit, rode up. Sceing him, Jemmy turned to Ware, and said:

"I don't like to see Pem here; as for myself, I don't care. I would never forgive mybe seen waving, there could Thomson be self if he were shot. He must be kept out of this hot fire; Liveld never meet mother

Then calling Pen, he told him to hand him his loaded pistol, and take his empty one and go behind the hilkand re-load it, and thus, in all probability, saved his brother's life by exposing his own.

he would admit. "Where are you going," said I. "Come, get down and rest awhile." "I was pushing on to see Rosser, but as my horse is tired, I'll rest here under this I spread my gum cloth, telling him to lav down, and he soon fell asleep. Poor fellow! little did I think that was his last sleep on earth. In a few moments a courier came rapidly by, and I asked him what was going on? He replied that the enemy were in our front, and were between us and High Bridge, and that he was locking for Major Thomson. I awoke Jemmy and we rode together to the front. Notici he was unusually silent, I asked him what as the matter. He said : "I was dreamin about home, and for the first time since I'v been in the army, I feel as if something was going to happen."

I tried to cheet him up, and to dissuade him from going into the action with his disabled arm. He spoke several times of his mother and sisters, and said he feared he would never see them again. On overtaking my command I stopped, and he galloped off. face of the forehead somewhat indented or and his anxiety for others, was strikingly I called to him to take care of himself, when

Just then our brigade was ordered to the front, and, on riding forward, I found that Fitz Lee had gotten in rear of Gen. Reed, of Ord's corps, who, in command of the One Hundred and Sixteenth Omo infantry, Fifty fourth Pennsylvania and part of the Fourth Massachusetts cavalry-in all, about eight hundred and twenty-five men-had marched across from the direction of Burke's Station sabres, they push back the rear guard on the main body, as as they could not manucure their men the whole brigade, and finally the division was driven in utter rout for three miles, until they came to an open with his right wing resting near High Bridge.

Rosser's brigade, under Gen. Dearing, was ordered to attack his right; Wickham his centre, and Payne's brigade, under Colonel Boston, of the Fifth, his left-in all about seven hundred and twenty-five men. Major Thomson was put in cor mand of the skirmish line on our left, The men were all dismounted and formed an infantry, and moved up to the attack, preceded by a heavy skirmish line. The firing joon became general, and the enemy, seein that their situation was a desperate one, ordered his cavalry to charge as a forlorn hope.

with his men, marching perpendicular to the road, in which himself, staff and couriersin all, about sixteen mounted men-were standing. The enemy a cavalry consisted of a hundred picked men, commanded by a Lieutenant Colonel and two Captains, and drawing their sabres, they charged down the road in gallant style. Their commander, several yards in advance of his men, made directly for Colonel Boston, who shot him when he was within a ew paces, and, rising in his stirrips, ordered his men to charge. Just as the words left his lips, a bullet, fired by an infantryman, struck him in the mouth, and passing through his head, killed him instantly. His men, enraged at his fall, pushed on with a yell, and the slaughter of the enemy was terrific. Those on the left soon raised the white flag, but it was not seen volver. While thus poised in the air, a bullet, evidently aimed at Thomson's heart, struck on the right. Dearing and Wickham's brigades charged, and as soon as they found that the enemy were about to surrender, slackened their fire. But the gallant Thomson, who was at our extreme right, pressed forward, not knowing what was going on inthe centre, waving his hat, and calling his men to follow. As soon as he saw the white flag, he gave a loud shout of victory. Poor fellow, 'twas his last joyful yell; two balls fired by the enemy's skirmish. line struck him, one severing the main artery at the lower part of the neck, and the other striking him in the body. Each was a fatal wound. Giving one appalling screen, he fell dead, and it seemed as if the la. lrop of his life blood gushed forth. In ther moment, all was quiet. About six hundred of the enemy had surrendered; all the rest were killed or wounded. General Reed, and every officer above. the rank of Major, except one, was killed; while, on our side, Thomson, Boston and Major Knott, of the Twelfth, were killed, and General Dearing mortally wounded .-They were carried to a hill near by, and there under a large tree, I helped to bury, side by side, the Yankee General and poor Jemmy. Several of his artille ymen were standing by, the big tears rolling lown their cheeks, and as Major Breathed moved away from the urnfol spot, he exclaimed: Gentlemen, with ten thousand such men as Jem Thomson and Reuben Boston, I could whip the whole Yankee army. Braver, nobler men never lived !"

General Beauregard on the Situation.

Yearly Advertisements by Special Contract.

General Beauregard, who is now in New York, says, in reference to the probable course of the southern delegations in the Democratio National: Convention, that it is extremely improbable that the vote of a single southern State can be cast for the Democratia candidates, and therefore the southern Democracy have no right to advise, much less insist, upon the adoption of any special nominee by their northern allies. The duty of the South is this: Accepting its situation, it will do its utmost to sustain whatever candidates shall appear most available and most likely to secure success in the judgment of the northern delegations. For General Hancock all the white men in the South would turn out and work with great zeal, if he should happen to be nominated; but if in the judgment of the northern delegations success could only be secured by the nomination of Salmon P. Chase, upon any other platform than absolute negro suffrage, then the southern white Democrats would gladly work for his election also. But if, unfortunately, the northern delegations should put up such a platform as the Pendleton people of the West propose, out-Heroding that of the Republicans on the negro suffrrge question, then the whites of the-South would stay at home and let their northern brothern take their chances of success or defeat without their assistance. Such are the views of General Beauregard and those whom he represents:

THE REMAINS OF STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS. -The trustees of the Douglas Monument Association, accompanied by a son of Mr. Douglas and others, proceeded, on Tuesday evening, to inspect the remains of the late Senstor, preparatory to the formal removal of them from the grave to the mausoleum to-day .-Upon removing the lid covering glass, the face of the illustrious Senator was found to be in a remarkable state of preservation-almost as natural as when buried, seven years ago, excepting that the eyes were more sunken, the nose more contracted, and the surpitted; but the complexion is very fair, the contour of the head and face apparently unchanged, and the expression quite natural and plainly recognizable. The hair looks as new and tidy as when first put on, not presenting the least evidence of mildew or discoloration.

The removal of the remains to their final resting place took place on Wednesday at ten o'clock. A guard of honor from the University of Chicago was in attendance.

"THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE."-A public man who lays down as his rule of action, as General Grant has done obedience at all times and under all circumstances, to the will of the people," must either have no convictions of right or must hold himself ready to sacrifice those he has whenever the varying caprices of the mass place them and him in opposition. What "the will of the people" is, the New York Journal of Commerce aptly illustrates, when it says; "The inhabitants of a certain island were unanimous in declaring that Paul was 'a murderer,' whom vengeance suffered not to live. But when they saw no harm come to him, they changed their minds, and said that he was a God.' Here on the same day were two opposite verdicts by the whole people, and both of them were without a shadow of truth for their foundation -he was neither a murderer nor a God!"

A PRACTICAL ILLUSTRATION. - A scene was presented, at a certain nameless place in this State, a few days since, which illustrated in the strongest and yet fairest possible light, the practical working of the Radical iniquity, sometimes called, by way of satire, " Reconstruction." The occasion was a dinner .-There were present, at the table, three ex-Governors, an ex Judge of the Supreme Court, one or two ex-members of Congress, and other distinguished men. The only person in the room who could vote or hold office was the colored man who waited on the table! Here was the whole thing in a nut shell :-Wisdom, intelligence, virtue disfranchised, because they are virtue, intelligence and wisdom, and ignorance enfranchised, because it can be used in the interest of a party.

[Raleigh Sentinel. STRUCK BY LIGHTNING .- While a storm ras at its height the Methodist church at Savanna, Illinois, used as a school house, was struck by lightning. The school had been dismissed and the scholars were standing about the doorway waiting for the storm to subside, when a bolt of fire struck the gable end of the church, tearing off the siding about ten feet in width, reaching the lower sill and. removing a large quantity of plastering on the inside, while the door-casing was shivered into fragments and the floor covered with ruins. At the time of the accident, as we have before stated, the scholars about sixty. in number, were huddled together in the doorway, and every one was more or less in-

My virtue is in my own disposal, my life in yours; do what you will, I shall do what I ought; and if I fall in the service of my country, I shall have more triumph in my death than you in all your laurels."

THE STATE CONVENTION.

In view of the near approach of the time for holding the Democratic State Convention of West Virginia, we think it important that some movement should be at once made by the party in this county. Interested as we feel in the defeat of radicalism, and earn. estly as we desire the restoration of good government, peace and order, we cannot too urgently press upon those who intend to act with the Democratic party in the present contest, the propriety and necessity of organising for an effective campulen. Already the candidates of the enemy. State and National, are in the field, and we know what we have to contend against. The State Central Committee have suggested, in their call for the Convention, that the several counties of the State; either in township or county meetings, assemble on the the State Convention to be held at GRAFTON, tion of the Central Committee has met with a response, and meetings have been called, county meeting on that day, if a convenient point be selected. "LET US HAVE PEACE!" Such is the language of the Radical nomince for the Presidency, in his letter of acceptance. "Let us have peace," whilst he stands upon a platform pledged to oppression and tyranny; "let us have peace," when he is committed to carry out the usurpations of a partizan Congress, whose every measure has been freighted with strife; "let us have neare," when an attempt is being made to degrade the white race and elevate the megro; "let us have peace," when ten States are held as military satrapies, beneath the galling soke of Eederal bayonets; "let us have peace," when divil law is overthrown and the military is made supreme. "let us have beace," whilst eight millions of the Anglo Saxon race are subject to the caprices some time since he passed upon him as not of five military dictators, who may, in any moment of revenge, throw them manacled into loathesome prisons. As the Memphis Acalanche truly says, "the burglar, while fleeings from the harpies of the law, often shouts at the top of his voice, "stop thief," and General Grant, while proposing to usurp the liberties of the people, and to place white white men under tergo rule, invokes "peace." This is an old game at which tyrants and despots have long played. Russia, with her licel upon the neck of Poland, invokes the blessings of "peace." England, while robbing Ireland of her libertles, says ." lct us have peace;" and Grant, while approving a policy towards the South more atrocious, wicked and tyrangical than that under which Poland and Ireland have so long groened, and from which they have sought to free themselves, sanctimoniously elevates his eyes like a dying Christian fooking towards beaven, and says, " let us have peace !" The shrewd member of a rich family, after robbing his brothers and sisters of all their interest in their father's estate prays for "peace."-He conjures the indignant children to submit. He elevates his hypocritical hands in herror, and with canting voice appeals to them in the name of a common parentage, and the recollections of the hallowed association of child hood, not to disturb that "peace," which the party now see that this premature forcing should always subsist in h loving family of a candidate upon it was a most fatal error. Such is the "peace" which General Grant invokes. He would brand the Southorn people with infamy, and while the hot iron is burning into the flesh, he says, "let are Virginians: us have peace." He would deprive us of liberty-everything which a freeman holds dear, and expects "pence". He exhibits a cause - S. Ayer, Maine; second district, L. H. the public benefit and amusement, he has or ly to allow himself to become a candidate for office, and his good and bad points are as faithfully sketched and as freely discussed as those of the race horse entered for the heaviest stakes. His habits of life are looked into; his peculiar propensities are brought out in bold relief; and all that he says or does is paraded before the public, for their inspection, and upon which they are privileged to pass judgment. Gen. Grant, who was never great, and whose reputation is of mushroon growth, is now erjoying the felicities of having his character and qualifications thoroughly sifted. An admiring parent who believes his son the wonder of the age, commenced a history of his youth in the New York Ledger, but the honest simplicity of the narrative was too much for the keepers of the modern Ulysses, and they pad-locked 4th of July, and appoint their delegations to the pen of the doating Jesse, and broke the contract with Bonner. stick, and is heartily sick of him. Grant is known to be a very self-absorbed, selfish, and grasping man. He takes everything that is presented to him, no matter by whom, or what the supposed consideration is. It is this weakness of Grant for taking which causes him to freeze to A. T. Stewart, who is so very wealthy that he can afford to spend a good deal for the pleasure of enjoying the company of the general of all our armies. Every time the general goes to New York, he stops at A. T. Stewart's. He tags the clever and canny Scotchman to his office, lounges there in his easy chair all day, and, whenever Stewart moves from one part of his vast establishment to another, follows him about, as if he were a faithful comrade bound to be at the heels of his master. But Stewart long since measured the height, length, breadth and depth of the man, and found that there was nothing in him. He found him a man with very low instincts and habits, and a very great paucity of ideas. In fact, being worth a pint of sour cider. He is consequently, now utterly disgusted with his rotege, and would be glad to get him off his hands, as he would a case of prints which had long since gone out of fashion. But how can Grant be anything but an inferior man? He never reads a book. He knows nothing of statesmanship. He is a dunce in Belle lettres. He is a novice in international law. He cannot converse on any great principle of governmental probity. He is not read in ancient or modern history. He cannot give an opinion, profound or superficial, on theology, the hermeneutics, philosophy, physiology, or on laws that govern the material universe. He can eat, smoke, drink hard, and looks owlish. In this last sentence, you have the character and habits of the man. Before Grant's treachery and downright falsehood to Johnson, the people considered him a frank. honest soldier, whose word was as good as his bond. They found themselves wofully de. ceived. Ever since that treachery and deceit to the man whose friend he had pretended to be, and from whom he virtually acknowledged he accepted a prominent position only that he might the better-betray him into the hands of his enemies, Grant has been rapidly sinking in public estimation. At the present time his reputation with the leading men, and the unprejudiced masses of both parties is very low indeed. The republicans took him up merely for availability; or, rather, he was forced upon the party by such utterly selfish men as Washburne, Horace White, and Russell Jones, in order to advance their own political interests. GETTING READY.

Radicalism is anxious to retain power in this county, but a fair registration will knock the props from beneath the rotten concern! The magic name of Chapline has lost its effect, and henceforth the doom of the corruptionists is sealed! They will make a fight however, and attempt their old game of fraud by manipulating the registry list, but this will not avail them. Jefferson county, at the next election, means to have a clean record, and will elect the whole Democratic ticket by decided majority, overthrowing the nest of ipers who have fraudulently crept into position, and who have fattened upon the spoils. On the 29th, the Radicals will hold their ounty convention at Shepherdstown, when they will present candidates to fill the offices of Dolegates in the State Legislature, Prosecuting Attorney, Recorder, County Treasurer, and Assessor. Billmyer having already been honored with two sessions in the Legislature, will probably have to walk the plank for some unrequited aspirant, whilst Chamers, the best man in many respects, that the party has ever allowed to hold position in the county, will probably go overboard because of his honesty. . He has already incurred the displeasure of the Chaplineites, and they will hardly endorse his Legislative career by a renomination. Then we must have two new men. Who shall they be? Capt. Smith, once of Smithfield, but now of Berkeley, is our favorite for the position. A defeat would not effect him as it would any other aspirant, is he has passed the ordeal in days agone .-We therefore present the rame of Capt. Smith, and we call upon Averill township to rally around her favorite son, and give him the nomination. Besides, we have a small decument in our possession, on the substitute question, which we would like to wring in on the Captain. As Capt. Smith must have a colleague; we hope we may be pardoned for suggesting a preference. We want the honor to fall upon the amiable Currie-we mean our friend Lind-of the Duffields neighborhood. He is our first choice, but if his connection with the Ku Kluk Klan and his antiimpeachment sentiments become generally known, we fear that his chances for a nomination will be slim. But we have a hope that his record on these matters will not be closely canvassed. Who shall be prosecutor? Stubbs by all means; celo answers Stubbs. He is the most harmless man upon whom the mantle of Stubbs could fall, and as Grubbs is the county Superintendent of Schools, we are determined not to break up the poetic couplet,

"I, Charley Stubbs, Am in favor of Grubbs, Or I, Jiminy Grubbs Am in favor of Stubbs

For the other vacant positions, we have no particular choice. We would like George Anderson to have something, and think he has been very shabbily treated by the party in the past. Sam. Lindsey ought to have a bone to gnaw upon too, but there are not offices enough for all, and we suppose he will bide his time.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

A correspondent of the Martinsburg New Era, writing from Hedgesville, under date of June 15th, 1868, thus places before the people the name of one our of own county men :-

Messrs. Editors: - Permit me through your valuable paper to suggest S. V. YANTIS, of Harper's Ferry, Jefferson county, as a suitable candidate for the office of Secretary of State. Mr. Yantis is an old citizen of Jefferson county, well known to all of the people of this portion of the State, of large experience in business matters, and of the purest moral character. But best of all he has suffered the most intolerable persecution on account of his Conservative principles, and has endured all that malice could invent or deviltry devise at the hands of the scoundrelism of Jefferson, and came out of the contest a Conservative, as true as steel.

MINERAL POINT, May 1868. On last evening's train General Grant's father arrived in this city, and when it was known, "and such things are generally known in a very short time," the 'leading Radicals of the city came is and were introduced to him, and they were making a great fuss over him. At last the conversation turned upon politics, and General Grant's father said that there never was such a nomination made as the Radicals have made in nominating my son as President; and Colfax is a very good man for the position of Vice-President. He said he was glad that Ben Wade was not put in as-Vice, for he had not a bit of sense, and talked too much, and would have been the means of the Radical ticket losing at least a hundred thousand votes in Ohio-don't believe in letting negroes vote; says it is too much like trying to make them equal to the whites, and said the only reason he thought they ought to have been freed for, was financially andpolitically, not because they were not in their place, for he thought the only place they were fit were as slaves, for they are not able to take care of themselves, and he told a story to illustrate the fact. Said the only way they would work, and the only way to treat them, was by using the whip freely. He thinks the people will be ashamed of giving the negro his freedom. He says General Palmer made a fool of himself at the Convention in his speech. He dont think much of Palmer or the platform. He said he advised them to leave the nigger out of the platform, for he told them if they did not they would be beat : and said one of the most disgusting things he ever witnessed was the pigger delegates at the Convention at Chicago. If he had his way he would have kicked them out. He said never-no, never-would he be willing for niggers to vote. He thinks the more they are educated the worse it is for them, and says he don't believe in educating them. He don't believe in them voting in the South or any place else. They had no civil rights at all; this country was made to be ruled by white men, and not niggers; thinks the Freedmen's Bureau the greatest swindler the country ever saw. The New York Tribune of Thursday says: "The case of Mrs. Madelaide E. A. Pollard against Mrs. Grotty, the keeper of a boardhouse No. 81 Cranberry street, and he daughter, Miss Grotty, who are accused of having committed an assault and battery on complainant, was called up before Justice Cornwell yesterday morning. Mr. E. A. Pollard, who was present, took occasion to deny the correctness of some of the assertions made by Mrs: Pollard the day previous, and said that after their separation he had made ample provision for her support. Mrs Pollard answered by emphatically denying her husband's testimony. The defendants in the case not being in court, the examination was, on motion of Mr. B. F. Morehouse, their counsel, postponed until this morning at 11 o'clock. Subsequently Mr. Pollard was arrested by a New York officer on a warrant sued out by Mrs. Pollard some days ago for assault and battery. The alleged offence having been committed in New York, the examination will take place in that city."

Mr. Pollard has published in the New York papers a card denying the alleged statement of Mrs. Pollard that "she has been married to her husband about three years, but soon after discovered that he had another wife, upon which she left him."

He also says: "It's particularly hard to be accused of 'abando ing' my wite, when I have spent on her peculiar and heartless extravagances more than fifteen thousand dollars in two years (all the fruits of my literary labor) and was recently compelled to deed absolutely to her the last vestige of property I have-landed estate in Washington city, worth six or seven thousand dollars, which is now being extricated from a decree of confiscation, but from which, through an engagement with a lawyer, she draws, pending the litigation, $25 a week-while I am absolutely without mea's and without employ-

LEBANON, OHIO, June 12, 1568. A case has just been decided in the Court of Common Pleas of Warren county, by Judge Winans, in which were involved questions of identity av f tifle to land at once singular and intereship. The facts, as developed by the testimon may be summed up as follows:

An eccentic old bashelor came to this country early in the present century. He was a day laborer, and never had a home of his own, but by industry and economy became the owner, if two hundred acres of land, lying among the hills of the Little Miami, in the vicinity of 3ort Ancient, which remained covered with its native forests during his lifetime. Alth high his death took place thirty years ago, he is remembered by many persons iving in that vicinity by reason of his peculiarities, and particularly as the possessor of a singularly potted horse, to which he was much attached. The animal is described as being of a pure white, variegated with spots of a dark brown, the two colors making a striking contrast. Some years before his death the old man made a journey to Virginia. Little is known of this journey, except that he rode his spotted horse, and that on his return he often spoke of having, while on this journey, fallen in company with a man driving wagon, with whom he entered into conversation, and discovered to be his namesake and cousin, though many years younger, than himself. He also made known his intention of willing his land to this namesake, as he had no near relative living near him. A will to this effect was made, and at his death probated. It derised the land before referred to to this coun, James Frazier, if he could be found living and in case he could not be found, the land was to become the property of one of his neighbors, named in the will, who was also made the executor. Soon after the will was probated, an effort was made by some persons living in Indiana, claiming to be the next relatives and heirs of the deceased, to taside the will, on the ground of the insan y of the testator. In the suit arising on this claim, Governor Corwin, Hon. Robert C. Schenck, Judge George J. Smith, and Judge John Probasco were attorneys .-The will was set aside by a jury in the Court of Commor Pleas, and the case was carried be glad if he is defeated .- Cor. Cincinnati up to the Soreme Court. During the trial in the Suple he Court it was shown that the testator was in illegitimate child. As it is a principle of the common law that a bastard cannot transmit property by descent except to his own children, having no other heirs, it became evident that the pretended heirs would fail to get possession of the property, and the case was dropped. The will, therefore, remained unimpeached. The executor of the will being the party to whom the land was to pass in ease the first legatee was not found, appears to have made no effort whatever to discover the rightful owner, but took possession of the property and treated it as his own. When asked about his title to the land, he always replied that he did not believe such a person as the first legatee ever existed; that the old man had never met such a person, but that his existence was one of his many fancies.

Thus affairs remained for more than a uarter of a century-the executor enjoying the use of the land, and having on two occasions sold a portion of it, while the rightful owner remained in ignorance of the existence of the will. Not long ago, however, a letter from an attorney in Lebanon, directed to the postmaster of a town in West Virginia, inquiring if one James Frazier resided there reached him, and he became aware of the facts of the case. It appears that during most of the time he has resided in a town on the Ohio side of the Ohio river not far from Wheeling, Va. He is now an old man, in reduced circumstances-too old to take an active part in the prosecution of his claimsto the land, but his sons have undertaken this work for him. The old man testifies by deposition that thirty years ago he followed the business a wagoning from Wheeling to Baltimore; st on one of his journeys he fell in comp with a man riding a "spotted horse." They engaged in conversation.— The wagoner spoke of the beauty of the spotted horse and his desire to own him, but the horseman declared that no amount of money could induce him to part with his favorite. Further conversation devoloped the fact that they were cousins, and they passed the night together at a public house. His newly-found elative invited the teamster to visit him in the Miami country, and told him it would be to his advantage to do so. Failing to make the visit, he sever heard from him until he received the tter of the attorney before referred to. If far as appears from the evidence in the case, their meeting on the National road was the only time they ever saw

The Court was satisfied from the facts proven, all of which cannot be detailed here. that the plaintiff was identified as the first legatee. He lecided in favor of the plaintiff. holding that the statute of limitations pleaded by the preser occupants of the land would not bar the plintiff's claim. Thus, after lapse of thirty years, the claim of the rightfollegatee, as we have good reason to believe, has been recognized. But a second trial has been demanded, and its issue must be awaited before the case can be considered

Orange, N.J., and Miss Emma Gilmore, were matrimonially united. The ceremony was unique. It was performed in Liewellyn Park. under an ancient pine tree, just after sun rise. As both groom and bride hold extremely 'liberal," as distinguished from other orthodox, religious views they requested Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, who officiated, so far to respect the w conscientious independence of churchly ordinances as to omit from the service any form of words based on these. Accordingly, after the young couple had presented themselves on a moss-carpet spot, and circled at a close distance by their friends the groom elasped the bride's hand saying, "I take you Emma for my wife;" the wife responded. "take you Liewellyn, for my husband," ar Mr. Beecher added only these words: "In Falf of the sentiments of the community which we dwell, and of the laws. I declare in virtue of what you have now done, the you are now husband and wife. May the love which has thus been declared, be a strong as these evergreens. (throwing a) their feet some evergreens and flowers) to reduce the storms and winter of life, and as a fragrant and tender as the flowers of stinmer. May God bless you!"

The friends then, stepping forward, threw down before the married pair many handfuls of similar de besprinkled offerings. And this, togethe with the multitudinous kisses handshaking and congratulations, concluded the ceremony - N. Y. Independent.

- There is said to be a great similarity between a vain young lady and a confirmed drunkard, in that neither of them can ever get enough of the glass.

He was riding a very clumsy horse, which upon striking his foot against a large rock, stumbled, and Mr. Coffman holding the rein tightly, at the time received a violent jerk, breaking the bone of his left arm, without being thrown from his

A TRAGEDY. - We understand that on last Wednesday morning a tragical affair occured in the western part of this county. The parties in the affair were Mr. Geo. Clowser, a citizen of the county, residing in Petticoat Gap and a man n-med Seacrist, a native of Georgia, but whe has been living here for some time. It an ears that Seacrist was suspected of having in proper intimacy with Clowser's wife, and on Wednesday morning, Clowser pretended to lart for Winchester, but, upon returning found Seacrist and his wife together in the woods Being exasperated he fired on Seacrist the shot taking effect, he fired a second shot, which killed him. He was then about to kill the guilty woman, but she, throwing her arms about his neck, begged him to spare her life for the sake of her children -He could not overcome this appeal. On Wednesday Mr. Clowser came to Winchester, and surrendered himself to the proper authorities, and is now confined in jail .- Winchester News.

BERKELEY COUNTY.

From the New Era of last week, we copy the following >

-We have been requested to announce that on the 24th inst. the Corner Stone of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be laid with Masonic ceremonies. The Odd Fellows, Good Templars, and Hori Gori's will participate in the ceremonies on that interesting occasion. The address will be delivered by the energetie and courteous minister in charge, Rev. Mr. Owens: This community deserves great credit for its affigent generosity in the matter of church building and repairs. This will be the fourth church that has been erected since the war, and all of the old and di lapidated "Houses of God" have undergone thorough reparation. If we, as a community, are not "wise it our day and generation,"-it will not be becose we have not the "Gospel at our doors." -The Pic-N of the Sabbath School o the Methodist f burch South, at Hedgesville, on Wednesday of last week, was a grand success. The attendance was very large and the arrangements for the enjoyment of the school, as well as the visitors, were complete. Everything passed off pleasantly, and everyone in attendance were highly pleased with the day's enjoyment. We regretted our inability to be present.

A woman nemed Murphy, living on John street, committed suicide on Tuesday by cutting her throat with a butcher knife. She had been laboring under an aberration of the mind for some time past. -Col. John Blair Hoge has accepted the invitation of Mr. A. M. Smith to deliver the Address to the Students of the Shenandoah Valley Academy, at Winchester, at the approaching commencement of that institution, which takes place June 24th.

- The Richmond Enquirer rejoices that the white men of Virginia are rallying to resist the odious domination of the negroes; that there are no more proffers of "conciliation." It advises the white men to offer support and employment to the pegroes if they vote as the white men wish, and to punish them with dismissal if they refuse, while it warns the negroes that they cannot remain in in this country if they make their pretensions to govern the white men the rule of their

- The New York Sun, Republican, says that the Democrats will nominate Chase, if they can be convinced he will make a better run than Pendle in: "What is more," says the Sun, "Mr. Indleton fully shows this feeling. He se the triumph of his party far above the inpty glory of receiving a fruitless nomination for himself, and it need not surprise any one to see him yet taking the lead in the Chase movement."

-At a Radical Convention held in Alexandria on the 12th inst., to nominate two State Senators from the district composed of Alexandria, Loudoun and Fairfax, S. A. Cole and James M. Hoge (whites) were nominated on the 7th ballot. Immediately thereafter R. D. Beckley (negro) was vociferously called for by the colored people and announced himself an independent candidate.

- Botts and Wickham are said to have the nside track in the race for U. S. Senatorial honors in the event the infamous constitution of Virginia is ratified. Is this the price of their treason to kindred, race and country?

Major Lawrence, United States Army, was shot and killed at Bowling Green, Kentucky, Tuesday, by Colonel McCarty, an ex-Confederate, during a street altercation. The latter was shot in the leg.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL. The ladies of this town and neighborhood, ever zealous in works for the perpetuation of the memories of the heroic dead, who sleep in our beautiful cemetery, propose a Strawberry Festival to-day and to morrow, at Jefferson Hall, the proceeds of which are to be applied to the fund for the erection of a monument over the remains of the Confederate dead in Edge Hill Cemetery. The Festival will be held during the day and evening.

It is hardly necessary that we should make an appeal to our citizens to encourage the Ladies in this laudable work. The object is such as to commend itself, and we doubt not the accustomed liberality will be extended in aid of the generous tribute proposed. The ladies will be gratified to receive contributions in Cake, Cream, &c., at the hall this morning, INTERESTING SKETCH .- Our first page this morning is occupied with an interesting sketch of a gallant young man from this county, who laid down his life as an oblation upon the altar of his country-fighting for her rights and dying for the maintenance of her honor. We make allusions to the lamented THOMSON, than whom a more gallant and dauntless spirit, did not perish in the struggle for Southern independence. We are glad that some friend has paid this deserved tribute to his memory. The brave, the gallant, the true such as he, can never fade from recollection.

A CORPORATE GOVERNMENT .- A move has been made in the Legislature of West Virginia for a corporate government in Charlestown. Properly managed and in proper hands, such a government would be a benefit. Improvement in our sidewalks is greatly needed, and we despair of seeing anything done, until we have town authorities who will insist upon an entire renovation of our dilapidated pavements. There is no great deal of disorder in the town to complain of, which speaks favorably for the order-loving disposition of our people. But the corporation law should go turther than is asked in the petition presented in the Legislature .-The test oath relief should extend to voters as well as corporation officers. The following is the petition referred to :-Mr. Chambers: A petition of Ur of Charlestown, Jefferson county, asking that the test oath be not required of persons elected to corporate offices in said town.

"THE WAR BETWEEN THE STATES," by Hon Alex. II. Stephens. This book, issued by the National Publishing Company of Philadelphia, is now being delivered to subscribers in this county, by the agent, Mr. John W. Dalgarn, who continues to solicit subscribers. As a work descriptive of the "causes, character, conduct and results," of the late struggle between the States, this book has the merit of having for its author, one of the brightest intellects and ablest thinkers of the South, and although we have had no opportunity to read it, we cannot hesitate to recommend it upon the reputation of its distinguished author. Mr. Dalgarn will wait upon the citizens of the county to receive their subscriptions.

LAND SALES .- During last fortnigh, the enterprising real estate firm of Smith & Walton, sold the farm of Mr. JOHN L. CRAIG-HHLL, near Summit Point in this county, containing two hundred and forty seven acres, to Mr. Frederick Shoof of Loudoun county, for

Since then the same firm has sold three hundred and thirty-three acres of mountain land in Jefferson county, belonging to Bennett Wright, of Loudoun county, Virginia, to Lewis Judd, of Connecticut, for $800.

SHAMEFUL QUTRAGE .- On Sabbath last, Mr. Morris Kain, residing near the Southern suburbs of the town, visited Harper's Ferry, leaving his premises in charge of his boys .-Whilst going round the garden to see that all was right, these little fellows were fired upon by some unknown negro from the road side, without any provocation whatever, the charge consisting fortunately of only powder and wad, striking full in the face the elder boy. We learn that one entire side of his face is charred and blistered, the eye closed, and his sufferings most acute. Have not our magistrates the authority, and independence enough to enforce it, of arresting and duly punishing every negro found brandishing his revolver or carrying a gun on the Sabbath, as is so frequently done with impunity, on our streets and along our highways.

THE HARVEST SEASON is again upon us, most of our farmers on the river, expecting to commence the latter part of the week .-The weather is exceedingly propitious, and we hope may continue so until this important cereal has been securely garnered. The large number of Reapers being introduced among our farmers, by the persevering efforts and liberal inducements of our agricultural houses, has considerably lessened the demand for hands, and we believe labor enough can be secured without inconvenience, to harvest the crop in good season. We have learned that $3 per day is the ruling price offered for good cradlers. The grass crop was never more abundant, and much of the early clover has been safely cured. The corn has been planted, generally, very late, but is now growing finely and looks healthy.

SUMMER RETREAT .- Our town has always been noted as a pleasant place of resort during the summer months, from the heat and bustle of the crowded city, and from present appearances it still maintains its ancient reputation. Already our hotels and private houses are thronged with visitors, and strangers are seen on every hand, enjoying the luxury of a summer sojourn in one of the most pleasant towns in the Valley of Virginia. We bid them a hearty welcome, and feel assured that none will ever regret the pleasant days spent in old Charlestown.

MASONIC .- The centennial celebration of Hiram Lodge, Winchester, will take place on the 22nd of July of this year, at which time the new Temple will be dedicated with imposing ceremonies.

A WORD WITH OUR PATRONS .- Why is it that men will ask for credit in the printing business, when they will not ask it in any other? This has long been an unsolved problem to us. There are those who would not approach a merchant or mechanic for indulgence to the amount of one dollar, and yet these same parties think nothing of contracting a printer's bill to the extent of three, five, or ten dollars, and allowing it to run for an indefinite period, unless their bills are presented to them half a dozen times. Our bills are generally small, and scattered over every ection of the country, making it impossible for us to wait upon each patron in person; hence they are often neglected, upon the mistaken impression that because the amount is mall, its being withheld will not subject us o serious inconvenience. The salaries of our employees, our paper, ink and other material, are all cash-or ought to be-and are all to be met by these numerous small bills, which in the aggregate sum up hundreds of dollars, and yet they are neglected to our detriment. The Presidential campaign, in which our future prosperity and happiness is at stake, is low upon us, and we wish to bear our part n defence of truth and justice. Now, friends, we ask you, one and all, to do us but simple ustice, meet the obligations you have incurred with us, and let us have what we have honestly carned, and we will strive to publish a paper that will have its effect in the openng campaign, and one that will be a credit o the community in which it is published.

RELIGIOUS .- A series of meetings were in progress during the last week, in the Episcopal Church of this town, of unusual interest and largely attended. Confirmation was administered on Wednesday by the venerable Bishop Jouns and some thirteen admitted to membership in the Church. The pulpit was very acceptably filled on Sabbath and at night by the Rev. Mr. Meredith of Winchester. Dr. HAMNER of Baltimore, so warmly endeared to our people by his christian zeal in their behalf, delivered highly interesting and practical discourses morning and evening at the Presbyterian church. The pulpit of the Methodist church was occupied as usual by the pastor in charge, the Rev. Mr. TONGUE, in the morning, and in the evening by that somewhat eccentric, though venerable old servant on the walls of Zion, the Rev. WILLIAM McElroy, formerly of this town. The services were appropriately concluded by the Rev. N. G. NORTH.

WASHINGTON COLLEGE. - The commence ment exercises of this institution were held last week, commencing on Sunday, with the preaching of the Baccalaureate sermon by Rev. Dr. Minnegerode, of Richmond. The Lexington Gazette in referring to the exercises, says with Monday evening, came the grand excitement in the Celebration of the Ugly Club. Everybody in town, and half the country were present to see the ugly man, &c. Mr. Clifton R. Breekenridge presided over these orgies in a manner at once graceful and pleasing, introducing each "known" man with remarks appropriate to their special deformities, and humorous in the extreme.

Mr. Jno. P. Strider, of Jefferson county. the ugly man, delivered one of the most humorous and laughable speeches that it has ever been our pleasure to hear. They were based upon the differential calculus, and were well calculated to amuse everybody. One, (Doct. Bagby) "Mozis Addums," from the country, was at our side, and we were fearful he would never more get back to his home from excess of laughter.

We understand that Mr. Strider, who is a son of Mr. J. H. Strider, of Halltown, in this county, had the honor of delivering the prize oration conferred upon him by the faculty, but modestly declined the high, and as we believe, deserved compliment.

COMMENCEMENT .- The Commencement exercises of Mrs. Forrest's Institute for young ladies are to be held on Thursday evening next, and is expected to be of a highly interesting character. The attendance, as is usual on all public exhibitions of this popular school, will be large and of an intelligent and appreciative order.

IMPROVING .- Although our community suffered heavily during the recent war, our town is steadily on the advance, and we hope ere long to see it one of the first towns in the State. New buildings of all kinds have been erected in every direction, and were it not for the unsightly appearance of the ruins of the old court-house and jail-destroyed by the 12th Pa. cavalry during the war-it would begin to wear its wonted appearance of peace and prosperity. Among the many buildings just completed and in progress of erection, we may mention the extensive establishment of Messrs. McElroy & McNight, near the Depot, which is now partly in operation; the large Agricultural Warehouse of D. Humphreys & Co., on Main street, on the foundation of which a number of workmen are now engaged; the dwelling of Dr. J. V. Sim, mons, at the Southeastern extremity of the town, of which the foundation has been dug; the Colored Methodist and Baptist Churches; the Freedmen's schoolhouse, &c. These are all evidences of material growth, and with the overthrow of Radical oppression, we may look for local improvements far outstripping any of the past. CLEAN UP .- Our recent spring season has been unusually backward, and the weather remarkably cool until within the past few days. But now summer is upon us in all its heated fury, and old Sol pours forth his rays with telling effect. Altogether we think the weather has been favorable to diseases of all kinds, and it now behooves our citizens to give their premises a general renovation .-Clean up your street gutters and alleys, your cellars and yards, and sprinkle lime around all damp places profusely, and you may avoid a vast amount of sickness during the summer season, and promote the general health and comfort of the community at large.

Coming. - Jeffries' Stereoscopic Car, which has been in Winchester for some time past, exhibiting over one thousand views, is now in Charles:own.

REMOVAL OF THE REMAINS OF GEN. DAN-IEL MORGAN .- The Winchester Times says; The remains of this distinguished hero of the Revolution were removed from the old Presbyterian graveyard, to the lot in Mt. Hebron Cemetery set apart for him and the Dutch Mess, on Saturday Evening last at 5 P. M. under the supervision of the Trustees of the Cemetery The consent of the surviving relations of the old hero to the removal was obtained twenty-seven years ago when the Cemetery was dedicated, but for reasons of which we are ignorant, it was delayed to the present. We hope some of our old citizens will prepare an account of Gen. Morgan and the famous Dutch Mess for publication. It would be of great historic value and interest to our com-

DISMISSED .- At the recent term of th circuit court of this county, Judge Harrison presiding, the case of R. Walter & Co. vs. Capt. H. L. Heiskell on a suit of attachment was dismissed by the judge on the ground that there was no evidence to support the affidavit upon which the attachment was granted. This affidavit alleged that Capt. H. was about to leave the State, with a view to defraud his creditors, but when the testimony was elicited, the court promptly dismissed the case, with the remark that there was no ground whatever for such an inference. We congratulate Capt H. upon this termination of an affair which seems to have been prompted by maliee, rather than with a view to obtain justice.

LADIES' CATHOLIC FAIR .- The fair held for the benefit of the Catholic church at Harper's Ferry, met with great success, With characteristic liberality, the people of all denominations patronized it, giving their money freely in support of the laudable object for which it was held. Mr. HIGHLAND was the winner of the cane by a small majority over Mr. HESKETT. The sleeve buttons to be voted to the most popular young gentleman in town were won by Mr. Edward O'Farrell by a majority of over 300. The voting was very close, all canvassing actively for their respective candidates, even the ladies' entering warmly into the contest, winning many votes for their favorites.

The sum realized amounts to about $1000. Truly the people of this community show great zeal in aiding all religious undertak-

"Mozis Adums" .- Dr. Bagby of the Native Virginian, who gave our citizens a rich treat in the shape of a lecture on "Bacon and Greens," some time ago, is now in the upper Valley lecturing on "The disease called Love" We hope he will visit our town on his route. We are sure he would nicet with a hearty re-

CELEBRATION .- We return our thanks to the Committee of Invitation of the Washington Society of the University of Virginia, for an invitation to the final celebration. The Medalist is S. M. Wynn, of Georgia. Orator Samuel McKinney, of Tenn.

THE BALTIMORE WEEKLY GAZETTE FOR 1888.

THE Northern Radical journals, in view of the approaching Presidential struggle, are making every effort to extend their circulation in the South, and to flood the country with Radical falsehoods, in order to lay a foundation for Radical frauds.—With a view of combatting as far as possible these mischievous agents, the WEEKLY GAZETTE has been established. It undertakes to represent the true wants and feelings of the South, and to re-sent her wrongs. It is the largest cosmopolitan journal published South of New York, and has already, within a few weeks, obtained subscribers in some three hundred Southern towns and villages. In the hope of accomplishing some good during the Presidential campaign we offer the WEEKLY GA-ZETTE in packages of fifty copies, to any one ad-dress, for 860. An Unlucky English Nobleman. A London correspondent writes as follows of Lord Hastings, whose great losses on the English turf are well known. The letter was written prior to the last Derby, which it will be remembered, added another to the many defeats of the "noble Lord :" If his horse, now first favorite, Lady Elizabeth, should not come in first, he is not only a ruined man, but he will be branded as a defaulter all over England. The story of his | ducing the slightest injury. misfortunes-for so we will call them- is a long and gloomy one, and last year saw the climax of them-unless next Wednesday is to cast him down a yet deeper abyss. On the Derby of last year Lord Hastings lost £100,-000-$500,000, gold. He said it, and in. October of that year he lost an additional sum of £49,000, owing to the unexpected failure of Lady Elizabeth, who had won everything but the one race on which her owner had so vast a stake at issue.

On a third race he lost £40,000, and this broke him down. He has not yet been able to pay these debs, and hence he has been assailed in desperate terms, and his affairs made known to the world. There is a good deal of sympathy felt for Lord Hastings, on account of circumstances which could not be described without lifting the veil from private life more than would be justifiable even in these loose days, If Lady Elizabeth wins next Wednesday Lord Hastings is saved; and let us hope he will prove that the bitter lesson he has received will not be without its due effect upon him. He is even now only 26 years of age, and you may remember that he married the Lady Flora Paget, who was engaged to Mr. Chaplain, and preferred at the last moment to walk out of a milliner's shop to meet the owner of Lady Elizabeth. The stories of remance are not wilder than have been the incidents of this young nobleman's recommending it to the profession and the public.

IIt now turns out, and we have the statement on very good authority, that the Marquis of Hastings won £30,000 by the Derby, instead of losing 200,000, as he was at first reported to have done.]

THOMAS J. BOYDTON, M. D BALTIMORE, Feb. 10th, 1868. Dr. J. J. Lawrence.

Dear Sir-I take pleasure in recommending your ROSADALIS as a powerful alterative. I have seen it used in two cases with happy results—one a case of secondary syphilis, in which the patient pro-nounced himself cured after having taken five bottles of your medicine. The other a case of scrofula, of long standing, which is rapidly improving under its use, and the indications are that the patient will soon recover. I have carefully examined the for-mula by which your Rosadalis is made, and find it an excellent compound of alterative ingredients. R. W. CARR, M. D. Yours truly,

Dear Sir: My youngest daughter, aged five years has been dreadfully afflicted with Scrofula nearly all her life. I tried a great many physicians, but without relieving her much; in fact, most of them said there was no hope of cure. During the last spring she was worse than ever, her body and limbs being covered with sores and blotches-with face and eyes badly ulcerated and swollen. Whilst in this condition, I was advised by Dr. L. A. Stith to try your Rosadalis. I at once procured three bottles, and commenced giving it to her. The effect was magical. In less than a month, to my great astonishment, she was entirely well. I am yours,
