I saw an aged woman foo.

To weariness and care;

Time wrote his sorrows on her brow,

And in her frosted hair.

Hope from her breast had torn away its rooting, seathed and dry— And on the pleasures of the gay She turned a joyless eye. What was it that, like aunbeam clear O'er her wan features run. As pressing toward her dealen'd ear I named her absent son?

What was it?—Ask the mother's
Through which a fountain flows
Percunial, fathomless, and blest,
By winter hever froze.

We regret to state that, as the Hon.

Thomas Entwizzle, of this city, was, on Thorsday, carving a goose for dinter boat, and sent it with all its savoury contents into the lap of Mrs. Duck, widow of the late Obediah Duck, Esq. who happened to be on a visit to the aforesaid honorable gentleman's. We are not particularly informed as to the full extent of the damage incurred by Mrs. Duck, but understand that she suffers very deeply, both in her temper and her dress, which unfortunately were neither of them insured. This should be a warning to all house-keepers, to see that their carving knives are in proper order, and that their geese were goslings in the spring.

In a recent instance, in London, a lady was taken in by one of these atwed the advertiser on short acquaintance, fearing, perhaps, the effect of competition. The consequences of which were a suit against her husband for cruelly abusing her. What better could be expected from such marriages?

In the Netherlands, as soon as a girl has given a promise of marriage, the apartment in which she usually resides, and all the furniture in it, are decorated with garlands of flowers. Every thing belonging to the bridegroom elect, even to his pipe and tobacco box, are decorated in the same maner. All the wine and liquor at weddings is called the Bride's Tears.

Farmers, as well as poets, ought to be classed amongst the "genus irritable," for there is no season so fine, no crup so abundant, but the farmer can find room for a grumble. A substantial yeoman of Hampshire was lately congratulated upon the excellence of the recent harvest, and the great reason he and his brethree had to be grateful. "I don't know that," said he; "what will we do for bad hay for our cows?" our cows ?"

It is an unfortunate error, though very common, that subscribers to news-papers fall into, in supposing, each man, that the paper is made exclusive-ly for himself. Each man should re-collect that it is for a thousand different subscribers, of a thousand different vocations, and a thousand different ways of thinking, and each man must have a share. DAN'L M'PHERSON. Adm'r, de bonis non, of J. M' Coy, Sen. dec'd. Dec. 23, 1831.

The inhabitants of Charlestown and its vicinity, who wish to deposit the remains of their deceased servants in the Methodiat Burying Ground, that the part allotted for the blacks is nearly filled.—
The very small remainder is reserved for particular cases. We have willingly complied with the requests of our neighbours, for privileges of this kind, until it has become inconvenient to grant any more.—
We therefore hope, that some other place will be found for those people.

Considering the scantiness of our burying grounds in this town, it is to be beged that a potters field will be purchased ere long.
