VIRGINIA MANUFACTURES .- From the report of a committee appointed at the establishments cannot be carried on as efficiently and cheaply in Virginia as in the Northern States, it appears that, in Wheelburg, Lynchburg, and Kanawha, more invested in the manufactories of these plas one hundred and thirty-six manufacturing establishments, employing more than one thousand seven hundred hands—the chief articles manufactured there being iron castings, bar iron, nails, and glass-ware. In Petersburg, there are five flourishing cotton manufactories, an iron foundry, a woollen factory, and several flour mills and tobacco manufactories. In Richmond

there are also establishments of a similar kind. In Fredericksburg and Falmouth, there are several iron and woollen manufactoiles, with flour and other mills. The manufacture of pig and bar iron is extensively conducted in the counties of Rockbridge, Alleghany, Botetourt, Wythe, and Washington, in the upper part of the valley, and in Augusta, Shenandoah, Page, and other counties in the lower part of the Valley, and in some of the counties bordering on the Ohio, and in the county of Franklin, east of the Ridge. The resources of Virginia in iron, coal, and salt, are not surpassed in any part of the Union. And the committee give it as their opinion that when the banking establishments of the State shall be extended, and the facilities of communication shall be improved, as contemplated, no State in the Union can carry on manufacturing establishments to greater advantage to its citizens than Virginia. We copy the following extract from the Balti-The great change in opinion that has taken place in Virginia within a few years, in regard to her manufacturing caabilities, in an remerkable as it is likely to be beneficial. Agriculture has been heretofore looked upon se the appointed pursuit of this commonwealth, but however great her capacity may be in this think, convince even the most casual observer, that her natural advantages are not inferior when viewed in connection

We cannot hope to reform our present system on a scale suffithat has been kept up by the Globe, and ciently extensive to be practically applicable to large communities, so long as nurses are chosen from that order of human beings, whose reasoning faculties where children are concerned, are limited to eat-ing sleeping and physicing.

Now these, in their way, are all well the Stock held by the Government, at one hundred and fifteen dollars a share. enough, but in reality constitute a small Thus the Government have received fifportion of the soveral items which should occupy the whole soul of those who undertake so responsible a trust as that of bringing up a child. In early life there is a great determination of blood to the cuticular surface of a child. This increased supply of blood will necessarily require increased facility for the exit of transpirable matter. In infancy, the skin is the great outlet which nature seeks. Should any obstruction occur to cuticuls transportation; the matter which should pass off by that channel is either thrown and the Bank takes its own Bonds, and back on the circulating fluids, or becomes condensed in the form of scabs on the skin of the child. ...

A good deal of this perhaps may be avoided by a regular use of hot or cold bath. For children who are healthy, the cold water should be used during the warmer weather, with a warm bath once n week, in which the children should be well washed with soap and a brush. When taken out they should be subbed quite dry with a coarse napkin, and the body rubbed over with fine salt; this latter may be very advantageously employed, for the effect of salt on the system of man is, as some suppose, a regenerating power.

When organic diseases exist in children, it is hardly necessary to state that cold bathing under any form is unsafe, with some few exceptions, when the nervous system is chiefly engaged. A proper atton bloow gridled bles bin tod of northis only save children from many of the distone and vigor totheir general system.
