

plied, "but I thought my Lucy might like to see these fine grounds and the houses and gardens." I have known the gardener and housekeeper for years; and I am sure we shall find them very civil, and willing to show us any little attention in their power, and we have time enough through the sun is getting low, for we are just at home."

Lucy was delighted. "She had never seen a nobleman's house before," she said;

"Well all these large rooms, and the pictures, and all the fine furniture are very grand, but my eyes ached with looking at them; I like this garden a great deal better. What a beautiful thing it is! But why sit down in this Arbor of honeysuckles so near the house?"

Lucy sat in silence for some little time, gazing around her at the venerable house and the trees and gardens; at length, she said, "I wonder if the last grand place is happy? Is the east of Derby a good man, dear husband? Is he kind and free spoken to the poor? Is he a man and man?" she added, looking with a smile of peculiar sweetness in her husband's face.

"How many questions you have given me, Lucy! Let me consider. Yes, he is a married man; he married, not many months ago, a young country girl such another as yourself, dear Lucy.

"Poor thing!" said Lucy, and she sighed from her very heart.

"Why do you sigh, my own wife?" he demanded. "Do you envy that poor country maiden?"

"Do I envy her?" she replied, a voice of tender reproach; "what a strange question! Do I envy any one?" and as she said this she drew more closely round his arm which encircled her slender waist.

"Would I exchange my husband with any one?" she added, looking up tenderly and lovingly into his face. "I sighed in pity for the poor young lady, for a lady, she is now, such a change is enough to turn her head!"

"Would it turn yours, Lucy?" he said. "Perhaps it might," she replied, in the simplest and most natural manner.

"But is she really happy? does she love him for himself alone?"

"My sweet Lucy," he began. As he spoke, his thoughts that he had never seemed so tenderly respectful toward her: "My sweet Lucy, you alone can answer these last questions; you alone can tell me if you look amazement upon me; but I repeat it, you alone!"

"But first," said Lucy, very artlessly, "I must be bold; you must make me a countess of Derby!"

She had scarcely said this, when, from one of the castellated turrets, a bell began to toll: Clifford rose up instantly, and without saying a word, led his wife to the Castle. They entered the chapel there, in which the servants and the tenants had all assembled, and the chaplain was preparing to commence the evening service; then, leading the wondering Lucy into the midst of them, he presented her to him as their future mistress, the countess of Derby, his wife!

Lucy did not speak; she could scarcely stand; the color forsook her face, and she looked as one about to faint. She started first at her husband, and then at the domestics around her, and at last she began to comprehend every thing. Eagerly she seized her husband's hand, which she had dropped in her surprise, now affectionately extended to her; then, with an effort that was very visible, but which gave new interest to her in the eyes of all present, she regained somewhat of her natural and modest self-possession; and raising her innocent face, she coursed to the ground, and met the respectful greeting of those around her with smiles, which perhaps, spoke more at once to the heart than the best wisdom of words. The Hall of Derby led his wife to his own seat and placed her beside him.

Lucy knelt down upon a cushion of embroidered velvet, with the sculptured emblems, and stately banners of the house of Derby above her; but perhaps of all the high-born dames of that ancient family none ever knelt there with a purer heart, or with an humbler spirit, than that now.

BY LADY.

THE WIDOW OF NAPOLEON.—The ex-Empress of France, Marie-Louise, has arrived on a visit to the King of Naples. I saw her yesterday, and a less interesting-looking woman I have seldom beheld. Her two muskets always have been plain, for neither the features nor expression are such as constitute good looks. The first are truly Austrian, the nose rather flat, the forehead very thin but intellectual, the eyes—a very light blue, with a decided cast to the right, and the month defective. Her figure is not very tall, in proportion to her size, and though wanting an eye, her physiognomy is not disagreeable.

Now that I have seen Mme. Louise, I am not surprised at her conduct on the fall of Napoleon; the weak and indecisive character of her features are visible in a countenance which might serve as an illustration to Lavater's system, go to the bottom of her soul.

Virginia ELECTIONS.

JEFFERSON COUNTY.

It will be seen by the returns that this county remains true to her long-cherished principles. Mr. Marshall, the Whig candidate for Congress, receives here a majority of 47 votes; and William C. Womack and Avery Kinney, Whigs, are elected to the House of Delegates, by decisive majorities.

The result, however, affords no true criterion, what to judge of the relative strength of parties in this county.

Thinking the residence of Mr. Lucas, the whole Whig strength could not be brought out against him; whilst he received the whole vote of his own party, and from personal considerations, the vote of several Whigs.

And the majority of Messrs. Worthington and Kennedy would no doubt have been much greater, but for the fact that there were four Whigs and three Democrats in the election, who voted for Mr. Lucas.

The vote of the county stands as follows:—by which it will be seen that turn-taking every result falling far short of that of their opponents. Relying upon division in our ranks, we failed, but with what success the result will show.

ENTITLED SLAVES.—The Baltimore weekly states that the differences which so long existed between Maryland and Pennsylvania, in regard to the constitutional right of reclaiming fugitives, are in proper train for amicable final adjustment. The State of Pennsylvania has accepted the proposition which our Commissioner, Mr. Merleith, instructed to offer, and a law has been, by which the great question of the constitutional power of State Legislation on this subject is to be submitted to the decision of the Supreme Court of United States. The cases of Bemis & others, will be taken to this tribunal, points raised, which must decide the constitutionality of the laws which have been put in force in some of the free states relative to fugitive slaves.

The Canada folks made a great fuss two years ago on the ground that their Banks were obliged to suspend Specie Payment, and that all their gold was now regularly paying specie more than a far, and not a penny more is shelled out by the Canadians. On the contrary, the Upper Canada Legislature has just passed a law authorizing their Banks to continue in Suspension till the 1st of November next.

Returns from about one-third of Florida indicate that Mr. Belmonte, who had voted Debtors to Exponents over Mr. Wm. The votes of one-third of the territory stand as follows:

PRACTICAL PHRASOLOGY.—Yesterday morning, we understand, in consequence of Mr. Kilkenny's bump of language having become enlarged to such a degree, at the organ of that organ, the tongue, oiled to Dr. Colver terms and epithets, no means pleasing to his protuberance self-esteem or apprehensions, the feeling, hearing the bumps of combative and destructiveness swelling to an most unprecedented degree—indeed so much that he could hardly keep his hat on Mr. Kirkham and demand an explanation, which the latter gave the shape of a leather strap with a huge buckle on the end. His adversary, not so backed out, prepared himself also buckle to, came up to the scratch, drew black lines around Mr. K.'s orifice of order, music, &c. What further developments took place, we did not know.—N. O. True Face.

QUASH! QUASH!—Going, gone.—The motion docket at term of the court is crowded more than ever knew it. In almost every case where a bond was taken at the term of the court, there is a motion quash it, which has been sustained by former Judge Monger, upon the ground that the bond was blank at the time it was delivered to the sheriff—and many instances for a variance between execution and bond. It has afforded temporary relief to many of our men whose property would have been probably sacrificed.—Mississippi the Sheriff and Clerk of Monroe co., have resigned their offices to prevent the holding of a court. The object prevent the recovery of judgments, the collection of debts.

Hinds county, a meeting has been to the same effect as the meeting in Marion, mentioned in this paper yesterday calling for an extra session of the legislature to pass relief laws.—ib.

LORIDA WAR.—The latest accounts Florida represent that the attempts on Macon to treat with the Indians, proved entirely abortive, and that refuse to form any treaty, but make of the language "let us alone and we will not molest you." The Apalachicola state states that some Indians, recogn to be Creeks, have committed murders in that vicinity.
