Thus guarded in its state-

Ments, the article deserves, at this time, especial attention, and that without respect to party. We would entlithe attention of he Heading men of all parties to a plain statement of indisputable facts. It is our purpose to avoid every controverted point; and to confine our-selves to matters of record, which no candid friend of the Administration can for a moment pretend to deny. On many topics connected with the currency question, there may be an honest difference of opinion; as to the Constitutionality or expediency of a United States Bank, the legality of the removal of the deposites, the concepts of a United States Park, the circulation of shadows. ny other details involved in the agitations of the last fen years. All these we would, for the pre-sent, avoid, and confine ourselves to the consideration of two or three points, about which there eannot be an honest difference of opinion, because they depend merely upon a statement of facts, which admit of no controversy, and involve

Thus we conceive wat no one will now prete that we were not in the enjoyment of a soldid and uniform currency, in the year 1836. The number of our State Banks was comparatively verible into specie on demand; as good, there-The trates of domestic exchange averaged but a frinting with the control of the c Bank were worth as much at Portland as at Nev Orleans. as a water level. A more uniform currency never, existed in any quarter of the Globe.

General Jackson was not disposed to regard the subject in this light. In his first message, he assailed the Bank of the United States, on the he awaited the Bank of the United States, on the ground that "it must be admitted by all that it has failed in the great end of citablishing a tound and uniform currency." He proposed to remedy the evils under which the country labored in this respect. Ha desired to reform the currency,
He promised to give the people of this country
a "better currency" than they then enjoyed. To this end he instituted a series of experiments .-He commanded an uniform majority in the House of Representatives. For the greater period of his Presidential term, he commanded a majority in the Senate. His friends wielded large majorin the Senate. This friends withing in almost every local Legislature. They had ample opportunities are earning out all their projects of currency reform. They passed the laws which they considered appropriate to their great work. They instructed their representatives in the Grants of the United States. They have had a full sweep, in fact, for someand laid them aside. They have had every thing their own way.

Heaven knows that the administration has pared no efforts, has shrunk from no violence has been restrained by no scruples, in the pursu ance of its promised reform. The experimen ferred from its consummation by no partizan opposition, by no popular distress. The country has been convulsed to its centre. Commerce, manufactures, and the incchanic and laboriou arts, have been paralysed and prostrated-still the experiment has been pursued. Ten year have clapsed; years of violence, disorganization wild speculation, private disaster, and public dishonor. All the relations of society and busi ness have been unsettled. Ruthlessly-recklessly-the experiment rolled on its pathway, crushin and grinding to powder every thing that threat

And now what do we see? Do we realize any good result to compensate us for our years of ca-lamity and convulsion? Is our currency improved? Is labor better paid, or more secure u to wages? Is there more uniformity, is there joyed ten years ago? Have the means of the Government been adapted to the end it promised? With the absolute power it has enjoyed; of suiting its policy to its purposes? If not, where does the responsibility attach of the failure? The Wines asked for no change. The Wines made no promises. The Wines have had as little power to effect good as to prevent evil; they have every where been borne down by the mamajorities of the administration.

And now what is proposed by the Federa Government? How is it to reform and restore our currency? Through what varieties of unour currency? Through what varieties of un-tried disasters, are we yet doomed to pass?— Where and when is this great object to be atsained, for which we have sacrificed ten year of social peace and happiness and prosperity?regard to our currency which we occupied ten years ago? The people care not for the means provided they be legal and constitutional, by ship the chief may be staned. PROM THE CONNECTION TOWNS !! ME DEATH OF THE PLOWERS. O, who can see the flowers decay, And never heave a sigh, That all that's beautiful on earth, Must faile away and die.

lome on the morning's ballny air, Their cheering fragrance cast, But when the noon-day sun shines forth, Their hour of life is past, ... Some linger on through summer hours, As loth to leave our sight,

But in the first rude autumn blast, They find the fatal blight. Some, amid autumn's fading hues, Do proudly rear their head : But when stern winter shows his face They're numbered with the dead.

They are all gone, forever gone, The flowers we loved to tend, Mementos each of life's bright joys, So soon to have an end. O, who can see the flowers decay,

That all that's beautiful on carth, Must fade away and die.

PROM THE PHILADELPHIA LEDGER. precise as to the date—in consequence of a dis-satisfaction which had long been growing with the then existing militial layer of the Committee wealth, a number of wags residing in the bounds of the 84th regiment, determined, by a practical tilustration, to expose the absurdity of the system of annual parades. For this purpose, having quietly made their arrangements, on the day fixed for the election of a Colonel, they repaired to the polls, and as their designs were unsuspected, they acceeded in critical states acceeded in critical states. ed, they succeeded in giving a majority of voice to John Pinch an individual until then compar-divery administry, but was destured in a short time to become widely famous.

As soon as it was Japane that an coller for thate—had been chosen to command a regiment, the proceedings, antong those who regarded the militia as the bulwark of the nation, preprint worning was Gov. Schultze, the then Executive of the Commonwealth, to withhold the columission from Pluck, and to order a new election. As this was a somewhat violent assumption of authori-ty, and as the original inventors of the scheme had now added to their numbers all who were disaffected to the prevailing law, it turned out at the special election that notwithstanding strehmous efforts were made in behalf of his op-Plack succeeded by a majority that admitted of no dispute or cavil.
