people come back into the path to which their interests would have led them at first, if they had been left to themselves There is one thing I constantly remark in the copper wash Democrats -that however they may rail against wealth and rich men, there are no people who pay such a court to a rich man as they do when he belongs to their party. They Buskirk, the Postmaster at Bloomington, fondle him and make much of him, flatter in this State, removed from office, forged him, and raise him up to whatever office a letter in the name of Mr. B. to the is in their gift. I have seen this more than ouce in this temporal ours and have had grown to their ower aristoffacy. This only shows that their outery against the rich men is a mere trick, and their democracy what I have always believed it,
