HARRY OF THE WEST. Come all ye bold lads of '40,
Who rallied 'round Tippecanoe,
And give us your hearts and your voices,
For Hazav, the noble and true.

Come show the whole world that our spirit Is up again, "see his end sure;"
And push right shead for our Harry,
Great Herry—the honest and pure.

Come forth, one and all to the battle, Determined the country to save; And strike for the Farmer of Ash'and For Harry the great and the brave.

A leader is he who ne'er failed us, So now we will give him our best; Then shout for the friend of Home Labor. The patriot, Hal of the West

For Protection he ever has struggled-He goes dead against the starvation That comes with one-sided free trade: So for Home and Home's Friend let's hurry.

And ne'er give over the fight;
Till the Corporal's guard and the Locos
Are put to inglorious flight. We're engaged for the war and we'll "go it !"

You need'nt think we'll back out For the flag of old Harry is flying, And "Harry and Home" we will shout.

For Harry's the name we delight in-O'er mountain and plain let it flow ; For as true as we live, if we falter, To ruin we surely must go.

A SINGULAR CASE .- Some time since, mays the Baltimore Sun, Mrs. Berry, a lacy living in Armistead Lane, Federal Hill, swallowed a needle, which alarmed her for some days, but feeling no inconvenience from it, she had almost forgotten the circumstance. A Warning to Ladies .- A Miss Emily S. Browne, of Seabrook, N. H., promised her heart and hand to a Mr. Pettingill, of Amesbury, who had come to the conclusion to get married, and had informed her of his purpose. Furniture was purchased; a residence was selected by the lady wedding garments were bespoken; and the happy day itself was appointed on which Miss Browne was to become Mrs. Pettingill. On the previous day, however. Miss Browne disappeared, and it was af terwards ascertained that she had gone to New York with a Mr. McGregor, to whom she was married, and after a reasonable period returned to Seabrook.
