consequently much less fire is necessary, and they boil in less time. The oven being the tity of other stoves. The heat is so equally diffused on all its sides, that it bakes bread, &c. as well as a brick oven. By means of the damper the heat may be driven through flues around the oven, which not only regulates the heat of the oven but also the draft of the stove. This stove is so constructed that no inside plates come in immediate contact with the fire; consequently they are not likely to get out of repair.

For information in relation to the utility of the stove, I would respectfully refer the public to the following respectable gentlemen of this county, who have the stove in use, and who I doubt not will do justice to its merins. Dr. M. P. Nelson, | Col. C. Harper, John Melvin, Benj. T. Towner.

JAMES J. MILLER. THOMAS A. HOORE, Charlestown, Jan. 26, 1843.

The underisgned has in use one of Hathaway's Cooking Stoves, and considers it fac superior to any other that he has ever seen or used. All culinary operations can be going on at the same time that the oven is used for baking. There is a decided saving of labor, time, and fuel, thus combining to the housewife what several fires and servants would be required to do. The saving in fuel renders it a matter of economy—it requires but a grief to economy—it requires but a grief to economy—it requires but a grief to economy—it requires but a trial to cosure a purchase. Persons desiring to see the Stove in operation can be gratified by calling at my house, where I am testing practically its attility.
