WAR MEETING IN PHILADELPHIA.

A war meeting was lately held in the city of "Brotherly Love," of the valiant spirits of Locofocracy, who seem determined to have "a brush," because of the disposition on the part of the British Ministers to claim Oregon, in the same tone and spirit with which President Polk asserted the right of the United States to that country. From all accounts, it appears that "the meeting was disturbed by the different Loco factions, and by rival competitors for notoriety and Executive favour, and after much hubbub, and sundry fist-fights, it was resolved into two separate meetings, with separate officers -each of which, amidst tumult and confusion, adopted resolutions strongly as-
