From Blacksood's Magazine. EACH LIGHT HATH ITS SHADE. With every joy we haste to meet,

There comes, with step as sure and fleet, A shadow by its side; And ever thus that spectre chill
With each fair bliss has sped,
And when the gladden'd pulse should thrill,
The stricken heart lies dead. The Poet's brow the wreath entwires ...

What weight falls on the breast? Upon that sword where glory shines, The stains of life blood rest. So, where the rosiest sunbeam glows, There lies eternal snow; And Fame its brightest halo throws, Where death ites cold below.

General Entelligence. From the Staunton Speciator of the 6th Nov. THE TRIALS.

The County Court at its session during the past week was occupied almost exclusively with the trial of the two negro. slaves concerned in the unparalleled outrage perpetrated upon a young white Female in this neighborhood on the night of the 23th of August last. Jini. (the property of Mrs. M'Dowell.) was first arraigned, and plead not guilty. The examination of the testimony was then entered upon. The unfortunate girl swore positively to his identity, and a number of witnesses were introduced who testified to a train of circumstances which placed the guilt of the prisoner beyond a third Friday in December.
