From the Kniekerbecker. WOMAN'S TRUE LOVE.

None stand between me and the cold, cold world I ve launched me out upon a treacherous sea, Beside the one I love, and closely furled, Our little span of snowy sails must be. To meet the bitter blast of rude adversity. He whom I love stands ever at the helm, Erect and firm, far looking to desery Our fragile bark, where softly eradled lie His dearest ones, this little boy and I. So when the skies are blue, and the water exim We gently sail beneath his watchful care,

And playeth with the soft and carling hair Around thy brow, my darling bold and fair. And hide me from the fury and the strife,

And shelter him as others sheltered me ; And at my husband's side unshaken rest ; To bear our lot, whate'er that lot may be, With patient hope and high screnity.

The School Commissioners Tailed to carry out the expressed wift of the people. But with their action, or rather inschion, we have purhing to do at present Another bill has been passed, and the former repeated. The question now before the people is, " Will you adopt the present f'ree School Law ?" If not, then we are precisely in the same position we were prior to all the legislation upon tute condition that we were prior to the meeting of the Education Convention in Richmond-and all the discussion, investigation, reflection, and legislation, will have been in vain-our time lost, and we been phantom. But we hope better things of the People of Jefferson County. They have always manifested cause of education, even though it might be by tax- day. ation on their resources, than to pay for the ignotonce of her people in the Courts of Sustice. They have always practised on the opinion that it is far better to enlighten the minds of the people at public expense, than to support an increased pau-

cles of his religion. The question then is "Shall we adopt the new or continue under the old system of education?" There are many objections to the old system, and we will not presend to claim an entire exemption on the part of the new - but of the two, we decidedly and unequivocally prefer the one to be voted for on the 1st Thursday in June pest. We tannot of course in a brief newspaper paragraph advert to half the objections that may be raised and successfully sustained against the old system of education. Among the rest

The first objection to the old system is one of sufficient importance, when considered within itself, to induce the people of the county to repeal it by the adoption of the Free School Law low before them. There are in Jefferson county, agreeably to the census of 1840, one thousand five hundred and eighty-eight children between the ages of five and twenty, who might terey, were generally returning to their attend public schools of instruction. Out of this number we find only seven hundred and thirty-seven children who were scholars in the schools and academies of our county-not onehalf-and out of these, the small and diminutive number of EIGHTY SEVEN reteined in struction without charge! Eighteen only out of every hundred children in the county! Can that system be adequate which only instructs 87 children where there are 1588? No one will pretend to say that this is either a liberal or enlightened system of education.

We consider the second objection to the old system one of great moment. Males and females are to be found in every county in the State, who are neither capacitated by education nor morality to give the first impress to the young and tender mind-the germ should be delicately nursed, for, "as the twig is bent the I tree's inclined." The mind, like the first fall of virgin snow, retains first impressions; therefore, the necessity and great regard that should a paid in the selection of teachers to its proper training during an infantile state. Another objection arises in the want of a uniformity in the books of instruction. A child may reside this month near a teacher who uses one set of books, and the next month he may be under a teacher who uses books of the same character but written by a different author .-What parent has not experienced the effect of a change in teachers in this respect? Books Nett Whig gain 12 - equivalent to the annihi- are changed, from he primmer of the younger, up to the Moral Philosophy and Algebra of the elder. This then is an objection that may well command some share of attention-particularly with reference to those children whose books are furnished at the expense of the State. The fourth objection to the old system we conceive to be properly set forth by Friend Janney of Loudoun, who considered the selection of poor children, and teaching them as such at the public expense, liable to the most serious ing among their comrades, and their self respect, and frequently prevents their parents from accepting a boon which they think is coupled with diaus distinctions.

That we shall never be contented until every child in our county can read and write - and every darkmed understanding be il'umined with the benigh and fertilizing influences of Education!

LIGHT ARTILLERY

The use of this kind of defence has been of great service to our army in Mexico, and we are glad that Congress, at its last session, passed an act providing for the e uipment of four additional corps of Light Artillery, making eight in all. This force, in the aggregate, can present a battery consisting of two battalions of forty-eight pieces, to wit ! thirty two 8 pounders, and sixteen 12-pounders howitzers. and be susceptible of division and subdivision into batterles of twenty-four, welve, and six guns respectively.

The great service of Ringgold's Flying Artillery has been such as to awaken the public mind to the importance of increasng this arm of defence. The battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma called iato practical use this new and powerful destructive, and established its character beyond a shadow of a doubt. A writer in the Washington Union, telerring to this lact, remarks:

When it was deemed necessary to contentrate two batteries, fully equipped, were sent to Corpus Christi. Both marched thence with the army to the Rio Grande; and remarkable in all was, it will be ever memorable as the field whereon was first displayed, on this continent at least, the full force and wonderful effect of objections, inasmuel as it impairs their stand- light writtery. No description has ever yet conveyed, or ever can convey, an adequate idea of hat effect; at which, it is but caudid to admitnotwithstanding our anticipations-the enemy were scarcely more astonished than ourselves.
