INDIAN SUMMER MORNING. BY PARK BENJAMIN.

A smoke as from a thousand wigwarms tells The Indian Summer. Soft and calm, the air Swings like a heavy curtain in the glare, Of the newly risen sun, whose fervor quel's Green woods have been transmuted into red, Brown, golden tints as beautiful as shells Stolen from the ocean's silver-sanded bed. A languid, drenmy, deep, delicious haze-Through which the nearest objects mellowed seem, Hides the blue distance, while the meadows gleam As if with harvests of the yellow maize-'Tis the return of Summer, brief and bright, His last warm sigh and smile of love and light,

LOVE. We cannot live, except thus mutually We alternate, aware or unaware, The reflex act of life: and when we bear Our virtue outward most impulsively, Most full of invocation, and to be Most full of invocation, and to be Most instantly compellant, certes, there.
We live most life, whoever breathes most air
And counts his dying years by sun and seal:
But when a soal, by choice and conscience, doth Show out her full force on another soul. The conscience and the concentration both, Make mere life Love! For life in perfect whole And aim consummated, is Love in sooth, As nature's magnet heat rounds pole with pole.

duces disease-and that part of the system which is weakest is most easily affected.

The Bowels being the principal channel through This land can be divided into two farms, giv- which a great portice of the imporities of the syss tem are discharged, it is evident that whatever act-beneficially on them anusi be conducive to health. And as the Bowels are the most effectual, and in pared to accept a price that would make the pur- fact, almost the only way by which a general impression can be made upon the system, it is perfectly reasonable to su toose, that nearly all diseases' will be cured, or at least, much benefitted by a judictious use of purgative medicines. If a physician is called to a patient what is the first thing done? He prescribes a dose or two of purgative medicines; and then, after a day or two, if the patient is no better, he gives him another dose of purgative medicine, and so on; doing some other little things—but the residence for the main reliance for a cure is upon the effect produced by purgative medicines. Therefore it you are sick, delay not, but take a few doses of Dr. Gordons Vegetable Family Pilis, and be again restored to health.
