POETRY,

PEACEPUL ARE THE NIGHT WINDS. BY L. V. H. CROSBY. Penceful are the night winds sighing, Soft the dew falls on the rose; To prevent its fragrance dying, While its leaves in slumber close. All is hushed, and nature's sleeping

But the rills and brooks are leaping To the peaceful night winds' song. Peaceful are the night winds sighing, Dew like Angel's tears distill; Giving life to flowers dying-Fragrance to the thirsty bills. Hark! the breeze is now advancing-

With her evening mantle on ;

Now 'tis past-forever gone; See the pearly dew-drops dancing, In the sunbeams of the morn. LOVERS, WHEN!

When should lovers breathe their vows? When should ladies hear them ? When the dew is on the boughs, When none else are near them; When the moon shines cold and pale, When the birds are sleeping, When no voice is on the gale, When the rose is weeping; When the stars are bfight on high, Like hope in young Love's dreaming, And glancing round the light clouds fly, Like soft tears to shade their beaming. The fairest smiles are those that live On the brow or starlight wreathing.

And their lips the richest incense give When the sighs are at midnight breathing Oh, softest is the cheek's love-ray When seen by moonlight's hours; Other roses seek the day, But blushes are night flowers. Oh, when the moon and stars are bright, When the dew-drops glisten, Then their vows should lovers plight,

Then should ladies listen.
