THE LOVE TOKENS.

Yes !- I will keep them for thy sake ! Oh! these are words of pow'r, From parted love, the sting to take, And soothe affliction's hour. Yes-for thy sake each pledge I'll keep, Through life's uncertain years ; And e'en the eyes that o'er them weep Shall find a bliss in tears. The simplest gift of those we love.

Retains a magic power; How dear to me the chain you wove, How dear the gather'd flower! Yes-I will keep them for thy sake; My heart their shrine shall be; And every wish, that hope can wake, Shall blend, through life, in thee !

Mr. W. was riding his horse through one of our streets, when auddenly he was jostled from his seat, and the horse becoming much frightened immediately, "broke off" at a swift run. Taking the back street he soon made his way to the town mill, and being "a stranger in these parts," he mistook the road with a bridge over the race, and took the one with only a plank thrown over for a crossing. Whilst at full speed he came to the mill-race, and with extraordinary exertion attempted to make the opposite side-there being a cut of some twelve feet in depth-but was unsuccessful, striking the opposite side with his respectively to recommend to this Convention a head and one leg; and dislocating his neck, he fell backwards and soon expired. To any expression of it, oming with the authority of the President, I am bound by my duty, and by my respect for his high office, patiently to submit; but, lest my silence should be construed into a tacit admission communication, I deem it a duty which I owe to myself to submit a few remarks in reply, I shall be pardoned for speaking plainly. In the first place, the published letter bears upon its face the most conclusive evidence that it was intended only for private perusal, and not at all for publication. It was published withou my knowledge, and contrary to my wishes -Surely. I see nothing in it which no der the same circumstances, I would not write aion of General Taylor to the Presidency, was gain. To suppose that it will give the enemy pective line of operations, is to know very little of the Mexican sources of information, or of their extraordinary sagacity and facilities in keeping constantly apprized of our movements. As tomy particular views in regard to the general policy to be pursued towards Mexico, I perceive by the public journals that they are shared part by a conspicuous officer of the navy, the structed by any regulations of his Department -It is difficult, then, to imagine that the diffusion of mine can render any peculiar aid to the ene- ed in the estimate of state revenue, in laying sickening picture is drawn:—
