THE HARVEST OF THE HEART.

BY GEORGE W. DEWEY. Life hath its Seasons!:-And Time, on a chariot of hours, Rolls to Eternity's gate, Adown a dim valley, where flowers, Bereft of their beauty. Lie withered and scattered by Fate.

Hearts have their Harvest :-And Sorrow goes after the reapers, To mildew the yellowing grain; While Pity, in tears, Stands watching, the laboring weepers Go reaping a harvest of pain.

Youth is the seed time :-The season of sunshine and showers, That nurtures the delicate germ. Which in life's autumn, Will bring to our bosoms sweet flowers Or thorns and a cankering worm.

God's is the Harvest :-Whose sickle by Mercy is wielded Among the ripe grain and the tares: Unto his garner The sheaves of the gleaner are vielded

This question having been settled, we presumed the matter would have worked along smoothly. But no, first one and then another obstacle was thrown in the way, until we find, at last, that the Locofocos who convened at the Court House, to the number of twenty-seven, (including minors, non-residents, and those who are not voters,) repudiated the holding of a Festival without regard to party, for the Volunteers, by resolving to hold an out-and-out Locofoco Barbecue. The Republican contains a notice of the examinations of the Schools of that town, and gives high credit to the Female Schools in charge respectively of the Rev. L. EIGHELBERGER and Rev. by Mr. and Mrs. Eichelberger, all the branches of the Female Education. The Examination, (the Republican states) was one of interest. The responses in History, and the exercises in French, evinced good progress and correct training; whilst the original compositions of several of the young adies gave proof that their minds were in a state successful development, and capable of the ighest culture.

The same paret gives a glowing account of he examination of Mr. Baker's School, which numbered not less than 50 scholars. It is stated that every exercise proved conclusively that the worthy Principal and his accomplished Assistaut, Miss Fixen, had not labored in vain in time

It is further stated that the examinations were of a rigid order, and gave no opportunity for mere superficial display. The tests applied were of such a character as to show that the progress was as substantial as gratifying. In Sacred and Profane History, Arithmetic, Grammar, Botany, blight their caus Chemistry, Latin, &c., the success was beyond all reasonable limit. The remarkable feature was, that this success did not seem to be confined to pupils of any particular age. There were several little girls of very tender years, who, in ome of the most difficult branches of study, were able to rank among the first of the Academy. In the reading of original compositions, several of the closing hours were most delightfully and profitably spent. Indeed, we may safely say that most of these efforts, whether in the character of mere familiar jetters or of regular essays, xhibited a fine conception-and a conviseness accuracy, did occasional eloquence, that at once surprised and charmed the listeners.
